JOKER IN LAW GIVES PENSIONS TO LAME DUCKS

F.D.R. Aids Beaten New Dealers.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—Lifetime pensions for a large group of lame duck New Deal congressmen have been provided in the last two years thru employment of President Roosevelt's appointive power and a trick provision in the law, Capitol hill learned today.

Congressional sources confirmed the existence of this hidden political weapon of the Roosevelt administration which has been a closely guarded secret. One report was that 39 Democrats, ousted from congress by the voters, have been thus rewarded.

The disclosure recalls the national furore over the retirement payments which the house voted itself Dec. 1, 1941, and then repealed by a vote of 387 to 7 Feb. 24, 1942, under the pressure of public opinion.

Despite that overwhelming rejection of "pensions for congress," there was left in the civil service retirement act a joker provision, it was learned, which has been used by the administration ever since to put New Deal congressmen, repudiated by the voters, on the federal pay roll for the remainder of their days.

Defeated Republicans would also be eligible for lifetime payments if they could secure a temporary administrative appointment from the New Deal. The secret system thus provides a political bludgeon of vast value in an election year, it was noted.

Get Credit for Service.

Elected officials are specifically exempted from retirement benefits under the law. The joker provisions, however, state that if any person receives an administrative appointment, he may, upon leaving that post, apply for a pension and be credited for all the years of service previously rendered the government if his salary was received from appropriated funds.

Thus, in the case of former Rep. William L. Nelson, a Missouri Democrat, who served 18 years in the house before he was defeated in the 1942 elections, the system functioned in this manner:

Nelson came to Washington and secured an appointment as an assistant to War Food Administrator Marvin Jones. He served in this position for only 60 days, in October and November of 1943, then resigned and immediately applied for a pension. He received full credit for his 18 years of service in the house and went on the retirement pay roll at $150 a month in January of this year.

Old Timers Join Parade.

Efforts to secure the names of additional beneficiaries of the system were temporarily unsuccessful altho officials admitted there were a considerable number.

They also admitted there is no statute of limitations on applicants and hinted that some congressmen, ousted from office as long as 10 years ago, had recently learned of the New Deal scheme and qualified for pensions.

Could Serve Only One Day.

A lame duck could serve only one day in a government post and then qualify for a pension for life, it was stated. Only congressmen, who have served at least five years, are eligible, however, and the retirement age is 62.

Government employees are assessed 5 per cent of their base pay thruout their years of service before they may qualify for retirement benefits. The secret system requires the lame ducks to pay 5 per cent of whatever salary they receive during their 30 or 60 day administrative appointments but their benefits are based upon the $10,000 salaries they received during their service in congress.

FEA Official Arrested on Bribe Charge

Charles Margolis.

New York, Sept. 1 [Special].—Carrying the money hidden in a bag of fruit, Charles Margolis, 44, head of the cinchona bark purchasing mission of the foreign economic administration, a New Deal agency, was arrested by FBI agents in a midtown hotel today on a charge of accepting a bribe from a Colombia exporter.

The agents seized him as he walked from the hotel dining room after the bag of fruit and money had been handed to him by Pierre Lakhovsky, the exporter, who cooperated with the FBI in setting a trap for the official.

The bag contained $300 in marked bills but agents said Margolis thought it contained the $9,000 bribe he had demanded for pressing the exporter's claims arising from agreements he had made with the official.

Had Demanded $10,000.

As head of the FEA cinchona mission, Margolis had authority to negotiate government purchases of cinchona bark to make war scarce quinine at the rate of $1,500,000 a year.

Lakhovsky recently came from Bogata, Colombia, to Washington, D. C., to pursue his claim for payments amounting to a "six figure sum." He contacted Margolis, who demanded a fee of $10,000 to report favorably on the claim, the FBI said.

The two reached an agreement to reduce the fee to $9,000 and they then came to New York, where the South American said he would be able to obtain funds for the payoff, the latter told agents.

The exporter then reported the entire matter to the FEA and arranged with FBI agents to set the trap for Margolis.

Following his arrest, Margolis was arraigned before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter on a charge of bribery. He waived examination and was held in bail of $3,000 for grand jury action.

Joined FEA in 1942.

Margolis was born in New York City April 13, 1900, joined the FEA Oct. 7, 1942, and has made his headquarters in Bogota since Jan. 28, 1943.

Prior to his work with FEA he was employed variously as a mining operator, salesman, and advertising work, and had traveled extensively in South America. His present legal address is Orlando, Fla., where he formerly was an advertising executive. He also has lived in Cleveland, O.; New York City, and Passaic, N. J.

Soldier's War Snapshots Picked Up in Cafeteria

To the soldier who yesterday left two snapshots, showing war scenes in Italy, in the La Salle cafeteria at 600 S. Wabash av.: The pictures were turned over to Miss Virginia Bekiares, the bookkeeper, and you can get them by calling Harrison 5847. One of the photographs bore this notation on the back: "An Italian waif presents me with flowers. I was the first American to enter this section of Gaeta."

THIS IS PAYDAY, FRITZ, NOT BARGAIN DAY

U. S. Prisoners of Japs to Get Relief Cargo

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—The state department tonight announced that after months of delay relief supplies of food and clothing will shortly move to suffering American soldiers and civilians imprisoned by the Japanese.

The soviet government has at last granted permission for a Jap ship to enter a port near Vladivostok to transship American Red Cross relief supplies so they can reach internment camps, the department announced.

Russ Balk Transfer.

Some 2,500 tons of supplies were shipped by the Red Cross to Vladivostok last fall. In May Japan served notice thru the Swiss government that a ship would be sent to pick up the supplies.

However, the Russian government refused to approve the plan for an unannounced reason, altho the soviets maintain friendly relations with the Japs. Instead the Russians proposed to have the pickup at a Siberian port. It was also suggested that the supplies be carried to the Jap border in Manchukuo.

Agreement Reached.

This plan was communicated to the Japs on June 10. It was assumed here that the Russian alternatives were offered because the soviets did not wish the Japs to get a look at the defenses of Vladivostok.

While the Japs were considering the alternatives, the state department redoubled efforts to have the soviets to agree to transshipment via Vladivostok. Today the department announced agreement had been reached by the three nations involved. It was understood the agreement applies to only one shipment.

RUM, 500 TONS OF IT, WILL END BRITISH DROUTH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 1.—For the first time since 1940, the British food ministry, it was announced today, has given permission to the Rum Importers' association to bring in 500 tons of mature rum from Jamaica, Demerara, British Guiana, Trinidad, and Barbados. This is the equivalent of about 1,200,000 bottles.

Rum stocks in Britain were described by a food ministry official as about 8 per cent of the pre-war holdings.

Importers are negotiating with colonial suppliers for the importations, it was reported, and are discussing with the food ministry the retail price. It is expected to be controled at about $5.15 a bottle.

HOW CHICAGO OFFICER DODGED JAP AMBUSH AND SAVED A PATROL

WITH AMERICAL DIVISION IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC.—Lt. Robert A. Niebergall, 1844 Belle Plaine av., Chicago, led a patrol which probed deep into Japanese territory and narrowly escaped being ambushed.

Lt. Niebergall sent his two scouts across a stream to reconnoiter before he advanced the whole patrol. When they reached the other bank, the scouts drew fire from hidden enemy positions. Niebergall organized his men to give covering fire under which the scouts recrossed the river unharmed.

Next day, Niebergall returned to see whether the Japs still held the ground. This time they greeted him with a knee mortar barrage. A piece of shrapnel fell on his right foot and burned the skin slightly. No other American was touched.

GERTRUDE STEIN GIVES INTERVIEW IN SOUTH FRANCE

New York, Sept. 1.—The Columbia Broadcasting system distributed to the press tonight an interview with Gertrude Stein, the author, by Eric Sevareid, CBS correspondent, who said he found her at a secluded chateau in southern France.

"We expected we might find her ill and miserable, but we were greeted with shouts of joy, bear hugs and a magnificent luncheon," Sevareid said.

He said the 70 year old author had just completed a new book called "All Wars I Remember," which was being sent to New York immediately. The book appears to be about the human race always destroying its century and explains Hitler is essentially a 19th century creature, he added.

Sees 42 Bodies Beheaded by Japs on Guam

BY WILLIAM L. WORDEN.

CHAGUIAN, near Yigo Town, Guam, Aug. 9 (AP).—I have today examined the bodies of 42 subjects of the United States, beheaded and bayoneted while they were helpless civilian prisoners with arms bound behind their backs.

The 42 bodies, all of Chamorro men ranging in age from half grown boys to gray haired elders, lay where they had been killed 48 to 60 hours earlier in thickets alongside a one way jungle road.

Half a dozen bodies bore large welts and tears on the backs, indicating beatings before death, but there was no other evidence of torture. Most of the men had been slain while kneeling, death having come thru one or more slashes with a sword at the back of the neck.

No Women Found.

All the victims were in civilian clothes and none bore any indications that they were taking part or had taken part in the battle for Guam. There were no women among the bodies I saw.

The grisly thicket was discovered yesterday by an advancing marine patrol. My own investigation, conducted between terrific rainstorms, did not pretend to be complete.

Pvt. George Kucik of 4419 S. Honore st., a patrol member, said: "I saw some children 6 to 12 years old who had been beheaded with their hands tied behind their backs."

Yesterday's discovery had been predicted for more than two weeks by natives. Frank Anderson, native member of the United States insular forces at the time of the Japanese occupation, escaped to the American lines during the first few days of the attack. He said that he had been on the Japanese "blacklist" as a member of the United States military and that he had been picked up by Japanese guards just before the attack.

Planned Beheadings.

He was taken with 29 other "blacklist" members to a cave, where he said Japanese guards fired rifles into the massed prisoners and threw four hand grenades into the helpless group. Anderson suffered leg wounds. He said that additional natives on the "blacklist" as friends of the Americans had been arrested at about the same time and that the Japanese had declared their intention of beheading them.

My inspection of the atrocity victims today was made in a group which included a number of other correspondents and Lt. Jonathan Rice, marine public relations officer.

DRIVE ON METZ AND MONS, BELGIUM; ST. MIHIEL, SEDAN, DIEPPE CAPTURED

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Army Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall has told army planners that the post-war American army must consist of the smallest possible professional organization, with citizen reserves, because the large standing army "has no place among the institutions of a modern democratic state."

His directive, it was learned tonight, has just been issued as basic policy for all officers planning the permanent post-war army. It contains, however, a warning that the war time army may be needed long after the defeat of the axis powers, in order to help establish peace time conditions agreed upon by the allies.

It contains also a statement that the policy directive is based on the assumption that congress will approve a system of universal military training.

Choice of Two Types.

The statement discusses the two general types of military organization which a nation can choose for its permanent protective force, the large standing army and the small professional army with citizen reserves.

In the first type, the directive says, "The men of the nation are drawn into the army to serve in the lower grades. The function of the common citizen is ordinarily to be a private soldier, or, at most, a noncommissioned officer in war.

"This is the system of Germany and Japan. It produces highly efficient armies. But it is open to serious political objections. In a nation maintaining such a system, intelligent opinion as to military policy [and the international political policy associated therewith] is concentrated in a special class.

"Under such a system the people themselves are competent to exert only a limited intelligent influence on the issues of war and peace. Under such a system only the brawn of a people is prepared for war, there being no adequate provision for developing the latent military leadership and genius of the people as a whole. It, therefore, has no place among the institutions of a modern democratic state based upon the conception of government by the people.

Urges More Opportunity.

"The second type of military institution thru which the national man power can be developed is based upon the conception of a professional peace establishment [no larger than necessary] to be reenforced in time of emergency by organized units drawn from a citizen army reserve, effectively organized for this purpose in time of peace; with full opportunity for competent citizen soldiers to acquire practical experience thru temporary active service and to rise by successive steps to any rank for which they can definitely qualify."

HITLER'S ORDER OUSTS GOERING, SWISS ARE TOLD

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 1.—After four days of Gestapo house arrest shared by his wife in their property at Karinhalle, Reich Marshal Hermann Goering was today relieved of command of aerial defense of Germany on order of Adolf Hitler, according to reliable neutral information here. The German home service radio had announced that command of anti-aircraft defenses had been handed over to the Nazi party by a Hitler decree last night.

The report concerning Goering followed rumors that he was on his way out as a result of friction with Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief and commander of the home front. An open break is said to have been reached on Monday when Goering sought a test of authority by ordering the release of several army officers held by the Gestapo. Two are understood to be generals who were rearrested after Goering's seizure and "disappearance."

GERMANS ADMIT THEY MUST SOON YIELD BRUSSELS

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP)—In a dramatic farewell broadcast over the Brussels radio, the Germans tonight conceded that loss of the Belgian capital was near but threatened "one day we shall come back." With allied armies at and perhaps across the Belgian border, a Nazi announcer made a last appeal for Hitler's cause, and cautioned the Belgians "not to show hatred against us or against those in your country who worked for us," promising: "We shall do no harm to anybody."

The broadcast was followed by a second announcer who said: "You who stay here remain calm. We Germans will always remain correct—we shall never rob you and we shall never pillage you."

Then an Elite Guard leader said: "I know you are eagerly awaiting the British and American forces. Within a short while you will fill the streets of Brussels and shout: 'At last, at long last, they are here, the liberators.' You all will acclaim the allied troops. We National Socialists, however, will face any situation. We shall have means to watch you, for we shall never give up our principles. One day we shall come back."

Then the Brussels radio went dead.

[The Stockholm newspaper Tidningen declared the Germans and their Belgian fascist friends were in flight from Brussels amid "scenes similar to Paris a few weeks ago," the office of war information reported.]

1,101 Lost U.S. Airmen Saved by Fort Fleet

U. S. 15TH AIR FORCE HDQ., Italy, Sept. 1 (AP).—Fleets of Flying Fortresses have made a spectacular mass evacuation to Italian soil of 1,101 American and 25 British airmen who had been shot down and interned in Romania during the last year.

Of the first American airmen to land, 670 were in excellent condition, 50 were wounded, 17 were on crutches, and 10 were stretcher cases. They were flown from a field three miles outside Bucharest.

As the big bombers landed gaunt figures poured out and suddenly were swept by delirium—shouting, cheering, and falling into each others' arms.

More Than 3,000 Downed.

During this battle for Ploesti more than 3,000 allied airmen were shot down and the loss in planes since Aug. 1, 1943, was at least 270, of which 223 were bombers.

The rescued men said the flak over Ploesti was heavy and deadly, while the Germans were so adept at defense that they were able to blackout the target completely by smoke.

Air defense also was strong and even the Fortresses making the evacuation run encountered continual fighter opposition both ways. The bombers were strongly escorted by fighters, one of which was shot down.

But with the Russians solidly in control of Ploesti more than a thou-

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sept. 2 [Saturday]—(AP).—American armies pounded at or beyond the Belgian frontier today and raced the Germans in an attempt to reach the Siegfried line before the routed enemy—beaten in the battle of France—can man it for a last-ditch defense of the reich.

A front line dispatch said Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' 1st army was attacking toward Mons, seven miles inside Belgium, where a fierce battle was fought in the first World war. Highways were loaded with American trucks, all hurrying north.

Behind these lightning columns, now operating at double the speed of the Nazi blitz of France, lay the fallen fortresses of Sedan, Verdun, and St. Mihiel, and the breached Maginot line. The Yanks had covered 50 miles in 24 hours.

The fortress of Verdun, where 300,000 Frenchmen bled to save France in the first World war, fell with hardly a shot after armored infantry swept thru the Argonne forest without a single casualty.

Nazis Overwhelmed.

Where the Germans elected to stand, they were overwhelmed by flying columns, bombed and strafed, and pelted from the skies by pamphlets calling on them to "surrender now."

Battle columns streaming into Lorraine may now have brought the city of Metz, less than 25 miles from Germany, within their artillery sights.

Already hard-riding patrols may have lanced across the Belgian border five miles north of Sedan and plunged into the Ardennes forest, out of which the German hordes poured four years ago to subjugate France. From 60 to 75 miles to the northeast lies Prussia, with her great Rhineland industrial center.

British Seize Arras.

On the left the onrushing British seized Arras, 27 miles from the Belgian border, while the American 1st army was no more than 19 miles away after taking Montcornet in an 18 mile drive from Laon.

Triumphant Canadians captured Dieppe to wipe out the memory of their bloody landing of 1942 and dashed 15 miles on up the coast to Le Treport. They also were fighting two miles from Le Havre, far to the south.

Americans at the southeastern end of the swift-moving 200 mile front thrust 16 miles southeast of St. Dizier to Joinville on the road to Belfort and the gap that leads along another road to Germany.

Battle Nazis in Forest.

After driving 23 miles north of Reims and occupying Rethel, other American forces engaged the Germans in the grand Foret de Signy, but it was unlikely that the enemy here was occupied in more than a rearguard action.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d army at Verdun and St. Mihiel were on the historic soil where the Americans 26 years ago launched the big offensive that drove Germany to her knees. With Patton, it was revealed, was the 90th infantry division, which also fought at Verdun and St. Mihiel in the last war.

Two Armored Units with Patton.

Other units now identified as driving on Germany are the 4th armored division, which earlier sealed off the Brest peninsula, and the 7th armored, and the 5th, 35th and 80th infantry divisions.

The Canadians, loose on the channel coast closed to within three miles of Abbeville, the Somme river city which the British are approaching from the southeast.

It was estimated that en route they had rolled up from one-third to one-half of all the robot bomb sites from which the Germans have been plastering southern England.

Dive bombers wiped out the gun nests in the hills about Verdun with its capture by Patton's army, and the dash down the last 49 miles to the reich's border of the Saar was at a pace which might place them there within hours.

[The Berlin radio said 12 to 16 United States divisions had won a hard battle outside Verdun, then pushed thru and had begun to flow into the Lorraine basin on the road to Metz.]

Tanks Span Meuse.

American tanks rumbled across the Meuse, most formidable river barrier to Germany short of the Rhine, both at Verdun and at Commercy, 43 miles to the southeast.

At these points they entered the belt of Maginot line fortifications, but there was no indication that the Germans were making use of the old French defense line. At Commercy Patton's forces were within 160 miles of the American 7th army pounding up from southern France.

Commercy is 25 miles from Nancy, historic capital of Lorraine, the frontier province which the Germans seized and incorporated into a greater reich earlier in the war.

The sweeping nature of the Canadian, British, and American army advances along the 200 mile northern front indicated that the Germans were incapable of further resistance in France. [The Germans said the fight for northern France was as good as over.]

Seal Off Rocket Coast.

One force of Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's British 2d army wheeled northwest from Amiens and pushed to Longpre, 10 miles inland from Abbeville, virtually sealing off 80 miles of rocket bomb coast southwestward to Le Havre.

Col. Gen. Josef Dietrich's 15th army has been using the 20 mile Abbeville gap in its flight to Flanders, just as the Germans used it to hurdle the Somme in 1940's climactic battle for France.

In the center of the front north of Paris the Americans were methodically ironing out a gap between their lines and the British on the west.

They pushed to Compiegne, 43 miles north, where Hitler forced the French to capitulate in 1940.

Montdidier, north of Compiegne, was captured.

Operating from 35 to 42 miles north and northeast of Paris, they swept up Bresle, Fouquerolles, Creil, Crepy, Bethancourt, and Haramont.

The battle for the important Breton harbor of Brest also neared a climax with the Americans fighting thru the last defenses. Americans seized dominating peninsulas on the west and southeast.

American airmen returning from sweeps over the lowlands said the Germans are flooding large sections of northern Belgium and southern Holland.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

Following is the German Friday war bulletin, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press:

"In northern France, our troops under strong enemy pressure have disengaged themselves further to the northeast in the direction of the Somme. The enemy took Amiens after hard fighting, whence he drove further northeastward and northward. Counter-attacks are under way.

"Strong enemy pressure from the Laon-Rethel area continues in a northern direction.

"Driving east from Chalons-sur-Marne, the enemy pierced the southern part of the Argonne mountains and is approaching Maas on a wide front. Particularly heavy fighting occurred in the Verdun area which was evacuated in the afternoon hours.

"The rest of the fighting zone is exposed to incessant heavy enemy shelling after the first enemy big scale attack had failed.

"The garrison of the naval battery Cezambre, which is putting up an excellent fight under command of Reserve Lt. Col. Seuss, is continuing to block the entrance to St. Malo harbor in the face of almost uninterrupted enemy shelling in which one enemy battleship participated."

1,607,366 ARE OFF ARMY AND NAVY ROLLS SINCE '41

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—The army and navy have lost 1,607,366 officers and enlisted personnel since the war started, a large proportion of them thru discharges.

The navy reported today that separations from the naval service, including marines and Coast Guard, since Dec. 7, 1941, total 328,366 officers and enlisted personnel.

Previously the army had announced its separations totaled 1,279,000 officers and men.

NEW MAP SHOWS 3 LINES GUARDING GERMAN BORDER

One Already Cracked by Yanks' Drive.

BY JOHN A. MENAUGH.

With the allied armies in France seriously threatening Germany itself, THE TRIBUNE today presents on its back page a color map which shows, among numerous other features, the system of permanent defenses Germany has developed to protect the homeland.

Farthest west of the permanent German defenses is the new Spiel line, which already has been pierced by swift American troops. The Spiel line is a hastily constructed belt of gun positions and similar defenses. It begins on the north at Givet, in a little salient of France along the Belgian border, and follows the Meuse river south thru Sedan, Stenay, and Verdun to Commercy. The Spiel line, built since 1942, is considered the weakest of the three main Nazi lines.

Seize Towns on Line.

American units already have crossed the Meuse at points on this line, and have taken both Verdun and Commercy.

Lying east of the Spiel line is the once highly regarded Maginot line, built by the French to keep the Germans out of France. This line follows the French border from Luxembourg to Switzerland. It parallels the third main German line of defenses, the Westwall.

Until the collapse of France in 1940, the Maginot line faced the Westwall, but since 1941 it has been reversed to face west. The Maginot line once was considered the most scientifically designed of all permanent fortification belts, but, since the Germans cracked it at several places after outflanking it, its weaknesses have been disclosed.

Moreover, it is believed to be definitely weaker now, facing the west, than when it faced east. Now it lacks some former natural advantages and many of its bigger guns were moved by the Germans to the French coast.

Line May Be Turned.

With allied forces now at Sedan, they either have turned or are about to turn the Maginot line.

Farthest east and on German soil is the third and strongest German line, the Westwall. Formerly called the Siegfried line, it covers the entire front of old Germany, following the east bank of the Rhine river up from Switzerland to Karlsruhe. There it swings northwest to Trier and then continues along the border to the North sea coast, along the east side of the Ems river.

In the opinion of Col. Conrad H. Lanza, whose authoritative articles on military subjects appear in THE TRIBUNE, the Germans are likely to advance the Switzerland-Karlsruhe section of this line into the Vosges mountains, 20 to 25 miles to the west. He also believes they may have built an advance line from the north end of the Vosges thru Metz and Luxembourg.

More Possible Defenses.

In addition to the lines already mentioned there may be a rebuilt Belgian line from Givet thru Namur down to Liege also is likely to be defended by the Nazis, as is a front linking Antwerp to the Spiel line.

Not a great deal is known about the Spiel line, except that it is a sort of outwork for the reversed Maginot line, built with far less efficiency than the other two main lines. Much, however, is known of the Maginot line, its system of steel gun turrets and concrete defenses, and its vast labyrinths of underground magazines, barracks, power plants, and workshops. The Germans captured some of the Maginot forts in the matter of hours by means of explosives, smoke, and point blank fire of six inch guns.

The Westwall, which actually is not a wall and is greatly unlike the Maginot line, has no imposing forts but is a system of detached posts, irregularly spaced in a belt ranging from 30 to 50 miles in width. Built by Dr. Fritz Todt, it is an elaborate system incorporating blockhouses, concrete dugouts, and underground emplacements, all protected by tank traps and land mines. The Westwall is roughly divided into three zones, the forward field zone, the main battle zone, and the rear zone. Each is more or less independent.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The ministry of transport's decision to put more buses on the road to carry churchgoers to Thanksgiving services on Sunday, fifth anniversary of the war, caused British motoring organizations today to ask the government to restore the basic gasoline ration of privately owned autos and motorcycles. Motorists now can obtain gas only for essential purposes on a government permit and must stick to specified routes. The plea for a relaxation of restrictions was made by a joint committee of the Royal Automobile club, the Automobile Association and the Royal Scottish Automobile club. It said the small basic ration allowance would help to relieve the public transport, which is taxed beyond capacity in most parts of Britain.

SEES 14 CHOPPED DOWN BY FOE IN FRENCH SCHOOL

BY WILLIAM SMITH WHITE.

PLOMION, France, Near the Belgian Frontier, Sept. 1 (AP).—In a little school house of this village 14 French male civilians killed by the Germans lie tonight in a single terrible line.

I have just seen those bodies and they have been grotesquely mutilated. From each the arms and legs had been severed and each head bears ax wounds.

Relatives of the slain—the killings took place yesterday afternoon before the German garrison of 200 fled from this town eastward into Belgium—stand before the school and weep.

The town is half in ashes.

AMERICANS RACE TO FLANK NAZIS IN DRIVE ON LYON

Germans Fleeing Rhone River City.

ROME, Sept. 1 (AP).—American troops who drove to Grenoble in a lightning dash from the Riviera last week have speared more than 15 miles beyond that city and are advancing within less than 55 miles of the Swiss border, it was officially disclosed today as the secrecy which had shrouded the operation was partly lifted.

The column was operating north of Voiron, 15 miles northwest of Grenoble and only 44 miles from Lyon, thru which remnants of the 19th German army were fleeing. The German radio reported earlier in the week that vanguards of the Grenoble force had reached the Swiss border near Geneva, but this was not confirmed by allied sources.

Threaten to Flank Nazis.

Presence of the column southeast of Lyon was a flanking threat to Nazi troops fighting rear guard actions against the Americans between Valence and Lyon.

[Capt. Ludwig Sertorious, Nazi radio commentator, said yesterday that the "increasing tendency of the enemy to outflank with motorized American formations the German detachment movement had increased the difficulties of the German retreat but could not prevent it." He declared that French patriot troops who "temporarily established themselves" in Lyon had been "nearly completely defeated by German rearguards."]

Allied headquarters reported that American troops chasing the Nazis up the Rhone valley had made contact with enemy rear guards between Touron, 10 miles above captured Valence, and Le Bourg du Peage, 11 miles northeast of Valence.

Allied airmen reported heavy movement of enemy troops on highways leading out of Lyon. They were racing to reach Germany before they could be cut off by an American column plunging eastward from Paris toward the Swiss border.

French Troops Advance.

French troops moving up the west side of the Rhone valley captured St. Argreve, 25 miles west and slightly north of Valence and cleared the enemy from the west bank of the river to a point opposite Valence. In London an F. F. I. announcement said French forces fighting toward Valence killed 500 Germans, including a general. The bulletin also said the Loire department had been liberated by French capture of Montbrison, 37 miles southwest of Lyon.

In the Alpine mountains along the French-Italian frontier American troops occupied the village of Condamine-Chatelard, which the Germans had burned in reprisal for patriot activities. From there the Americans made contact with enemy outposts just northwest of Lagache pass on the Italian frontier, some 55 miles north northwest of Nice.

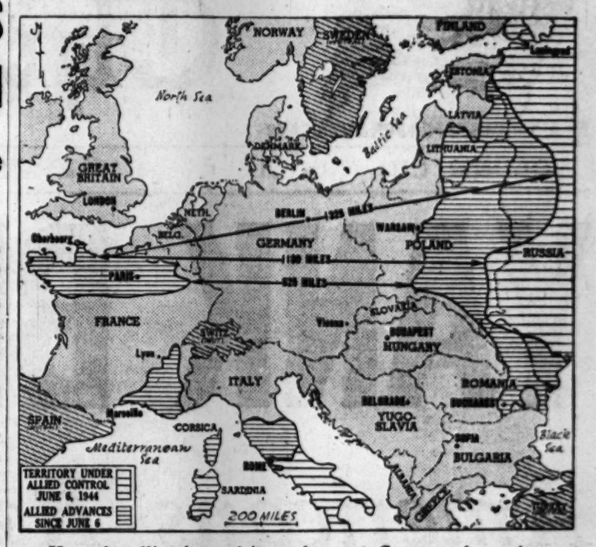
Island Garrisons Give Up.

The allied command reported the situation "unchanged" on the Riviera since the American occupation of Nice, famous resort city, 12 miles from the Italian frontier.

[The Ankara radio said allied troops had crossed the Italian border and taken the town of Ventimiglia, about three miles inside Italy. The British radio said Swiss correspondents also reported American troops had crossed the border.]

The navy announced that the Nazi garrisons on the islands of Rationneau and Pomergues of Marseille had surrendered to the captain of a United States cruiser on Aug. 29 and that 90 American marines had taken over the islands.

Allied Gains Since Landing in France



How the allies have driven closer to Germany from the east, west, and south since June 6, when beachhead in north France was established. Longest arrow shows distance between beachhead and Russian front on that day, and shortest arrow the distance yesterday between fronts. Other gains have also been made in south France and Italy.

GERMANS BURN FRENCH GRAIN AS THEY FLEE

Haste Saves Most of Crops, However.

BY HAROLD DENNY.
[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

WITH THE UNITED STATES 1ST ARMY, Sept. 1.—The Germans are retreating into Belgium, leaving a trail of burning granaries behind them. Today I counted a dozen blazing barns in half an hour's jeep ride back from the front line.

Their French owners told me that Germans on motorcycles had thrown hand grenades into them just before they fled from our advancing forces. These barns, they said, were filled with wheat and hay.

But the Germans have started too late and have not had enough time to scorch much of this earth. Most of the crops are intact.

Our forces are still pushing ahead so fast that they do not always know where they are and sometimes are not even sure what country they are in. This afternoon I asked a major whether any of our troops were in Belgium.

"I do not know," he responded. "I have not been to the front line for a couple of hours."

For the first time we are finding bridges blown almost everywhere in front of us. Engineers throw temporary structures across so quickly there is little delay, but it is annoying.

CHIEF WHO SCUTTLED FLEET IS REPORTED SEIZED BY FRENCH

MARSEILLES, France, Sept. 1 [Reuter].—Adm. Jean De la Borde, who as naval commander in chief at Toulon in November, 1942, ordered the scuttling of the French fleet, has been placed under house detention on the orders of French authorities, it was reported here today.

[Adm. De la Borde, after the allied landings in North Africa, received a telegram from Adm. Jean Darlan, inviting the French fleet to leave Toulon and join allied forces in Oran. Instead, the fleet was scuttled, De la Barde and his staff remaining in the battleship Strasbourg as she settled. In recent years De la Borde is said to have been loyal to Marshal Henri Petain but opposed to Pierre Laval.]

GERMANS LEAVE VERDUN FAST AS YANKS SPEED IN

Americans Find Stocks of Nazi Supplies.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VERDUN, France, Sept. 1.—The Germans fled this city so speedily yesterday that they left behind a large quantity of supplies. Our armor swooped down on Verdun from Reims, rolling at 40 miles an hour thru the Argonne forest where many thousands died during the first World war. It passed cemeteries in which row after row of white crosses mark the resting place of those dead.

German opposition was very light—indeed so light that American infantry men had no casualties whatever in traveling from Reims to the Verdun that is so inseparably linked in French memory with the immortal slogan, "They shall not pass."

Nazis Delay Advance Slightly.

This morning, however, at the town of Clermont, the Germans set up a few 88's, brought up about 200 men and cut our route for a few hours after ambushing one party and capturing a few vehicles and some men. The column which we were accompanying was halted during this time and then continued when more armor arrived. The Germans, frightened by the approach of additional tanks, pulled out of Clermont an hour before our arrival, taking prisoners with them.

In Verdun proper, where crowds lined the streets, the Germans had a large arsenal. Included in the materiel found were machine guns, a carload of tires, nine heavy artillery pieces, four rocket guns, and five truckloads of barbed wire.

Also there were 50 ammunition carts, a couple of small warehouses filled with ammunition, large amounts of harness for horses, a complete carpenter shop, a machine shop, a number of cases of tools and a number of small trailers.

Midwesterners in Action.

We saw only a small number of prisoners today, but this was not unexpected since the Germans seem to be doing more running than fighting.

On the road to Verdun we passed a road block where we met Pfc. Glen Christensen, 6459 S. Ingleside av., Chicago. I also saw today Capt. A. P. Teegarden, Veedersburg, Ind., and Warrant Officer Frank Donghi, Birmingham, Mich., who, oddly, lives about a half block from my mother's home in that town.

We saw quite a number of burned out German vehicles and only four American trucks. These included a burning truck which was knocked out in this morning's ambush and a second truck on which was scrawled the name, "Cowboy Eddie," which had four bullet holes in the windshield.

Our armed forces entered Verdun yesterday morning and the infantry, which followed, arrived just in time to repel a German attempt to reenter the town.

Yanks Are Optimistic.

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY, France, Sept. 1 (AP).—As allied forces dash toward Germany a wave of optimism is sweeping soldiers and officers. Bets are common that the war will be over in two or three weeks. But older heads caution that Hitler is still in the saddle and may be really able to make a last ditch stand in Germany.

Thus far, Gen. Eisenhower has accomplished a modern military miracle by keeping his armies going at top speed without halting to regroup and refit since July 25 when the first great breakout blow was struck.

NAZIS RISK ALL ALONG ROAD OF WOE INTO LYON

Run Yank Gantlet in South France.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH 7TH ARMY IN RHONE VALLEY BELOW VALENCE, France, Aug. 29 [Delayed]. — German forces, taking heavy losses in a desperate gamble, were running the gantlet of American artillery and tank fire and bombings on highway 7 along the east bank of the Rhone river today. The enemy was running for temporary safety in the Lyon-Dijon sector, and it was a case of the devil take the hindmost as he sacrificed what he could not get thru Yank road barricades and tank screens.

The Americans were encountering more Nazi stuff in this sector between Montelimar and Valence than was indicated before—there being elements of three German divisions, the crack 11th panzer, a good infantry division, the 198th, and another fair infantry division, the 338th. [Valance has since been captured.]

Seize German General.

One captive today was Brig. Gen. Otto Richter, commanding the 198th. He had been with the German 18th army in Russia. Richter, lean, hard-faced and blue eyed, was very disdainful and irate at being seized. But there was nothing supercilious about the way he tackled his first American meal.

There were three fierce struggles at barricades this afternoon. One was just above Montelimar, the second south of the Drome river where it flows into the Rhone about midway between Montelimar and Valence, and the third a little north of the Drome.

Nazis Leave 350 Vehicles.

More than 350 enemy vehicles were left south of Montelimar. Some of them were riddled and rendered immobile by our artillery and bombing, but others only needed gas.

Between Montelimar and the Drome river a German staff car and a big ammunition carrier came to an explosive end. The car and carrier were heading toward an American position. A Yank tank destroyer opened fire. And from behind, a German 88 gunner, possibly thinking that the two Nazi vehicles were intending to surrender, fired a shell. The German shell hit the back of the carrier and an American missle hit the front of the staff car simultaneously. There wasn't enough left of the vehicles and their personnel to pick up.

ARMY NAMES 6 REPORTERS SENT BACK TO BRITAIN

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sept. 1 (AP).—The names of six correspondents suspended for reported violation of censorship regulations in Paris were made public tonight by supreme headquarters, which said that investigation of their cases was continuing.

They were listed as Paul Manning of the Mutual Broadcasting corporation, Seaghan Maynes of Reuters, James F. McGlincy of United Press, Larry Lesueur of the Columbia Broadcasting system, and Robin Duff and Howard Marshal of the British Broadcasting corporation.

A headquarters public relations officer said the six were reported to have broadcast over Radio Nationale de France on Aug. 25 without submitting to military censorship. Headquarters, he added, had ordered them returned to London pending investigation.

Surrender Flags Fly Over St. Malo Isle, Say Flyers

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Pilots of two reconnaissance planes reported late today that they had seen white flags over the little German held island of Cezembre at the entrance to the St. Malo harbor, but supreme allied headquarters had no report tonight of surrender. The isle had been under allied air attack.

FRENCH TIP OVER GERMANS' POTS AND PANS 'TAX'

BY ROBERT SAGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 29 [Delayed].—When the Germans made their hasty exit from Paris they left behind the wreckage of their biggest administrative flop in four years of occupation — the non-ferrous metal tax swindle.

From start to finish the invaders struggled to scrape up the last ounce of copper in this country. They managed to get about all that was publicly accessible.

Having accomplished this, they were trying to pry out copperware concealed in private households when the allies arrived. It was this vast plan—calculated to bring in hundreds of tons—that ended in complete failure.

Started 3 Years Ago.

The various German schemes to get hold of copper began to be put in effect early in 1941, by which time the inventories of the notorious committees of organization had permitted them to grab most of the industrial stocks of non-ferrous metals.

That done, they began on the city's public statues, of which there were some 200, many of them containing several tons of bronze. The papers announced that, in order to procure telephone wires for France and much needed sulphate of copper for its vineyards, an art commission would designate for the melting pot all statues without artistic or historical value.

In reality about nine-tenths of the city's bronze statues went, regardless of art or history.

American Statues Respected.

A curious note was that every statue commemorating an American or Franco-American historical event was respected. Today Benjamin Franklin still sits in his bronze armchair across from the Trocadero, George Washington on horseback still is raising his sword in the Place d'Iena, and Lafayette and Washington, the gift of Joseph Pulitzer and the work of Bartholdi, creator of the Statue of Liberty, still shake hands in the Place des Etats Unis. Numerous other American pieces, including the laughing 1917 doughboy, likewise are intact.

After the statues, the Nazis took the famous "zincs" or nonferrous alloy taps from every small cafe bar in France. Then the proposition was told that for every kilogram [2.2 pounds] of copper turned in the donor would be entitled to buy a quart of ordinary wine. Having for a long time been confined to one bottle a week, many thirsty Parisians tumbled for this bait.

Pots and Pans Sought.

Later the Germans learned of the network of copper cables spread thruout the city. Sidewalks were torn up for months while the precious cables were disinterred.

Ordinary resources being exhausted extraordinary measures were taken by the Germans. In every good French bourgeois kitchen, the proudest possession is a complete set of heavy copper pots and pans. French homes also boast andirons, candlesticks, bronze statuary, and brass clocks. A supreme effort was made to get at these.

The means was a "metal tax," based on the rent, and levied on every inhabitant allegedly in order to obtain copper for the vineyards.

Lost Boy and Dog

With his collie dog Lassie, Charles Flahive Jr., 9, left home Thursday afternoon to find his aunt who he said works near "the boats and the railroad tracks." He and his dog slept Thursday night in a park. They were still looking yesterday afternoon when policemen picked them up at Wells st. and Wacker dr. and took them to the Central station. Policemen bought the boy a package of cookies and he fed several to his dog before eating any himself. He said he lives at 1624 Kimball av. and word was sent to his parents that he was at the station.

SPORTS PALACE GETS NEW TYPE OF FRENCH 'FAN'

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Where the Germas once held their political prisoners before deportation, 1,700 French men and women accused of being collaborationists now line up daily for their rations.

They are living and eating in the huge Palais d'Sport, which corresponds in size to the Chicago Stadium. Once this huge building echoed to the roar of excited fans watching six day bike races. Under the Germans it held political prisoners, many of them Jews, before they were shipped to concentration camps. Just before the allies arrived it was used as a gathering point for French workers rounded up by the Germans for forced labor in Nazi war plants.

But today long queues wait there to get rations of noodles, bread, and jam distributed by the French Social aid. In the line are such men as Sacha Guitry, famous actor and playwright; Pierre Taittinger, former president of the Paris municipal council, a job corresponding to mayor; two generals; Rene Bouffet, former prefect of the Seine department, and Serge Lifar, noted ballet dancer.

Women prisoners are kept in a separate section. Many have had their heads shaved by patriots who believed they had been too intimate with the Germans. There is one woman who wears the uniform of a lieutenant in the auxiliary of the Waffen SS [elite guard].

The famous Paris bourse opened Thursday but there has been little change in quotations. The stock exchange reportedly had been manipulated by the government.

A serious fuel shortage indicates Paris may have no electric lights for some time. Officials refuse to estimate when service on the underground [Metro] will be restored, altho very reduced service on some of the suburban electric lines has been restored. Bus lines also run to the suburbs.

The statue of Marshal Petain, erected recently in the courtyard of the Legion of Honor, has been draped with cloth to cover it from the eyes of passers-by.

Edouard Bourdet, playwright who wrote "The Captive" and "The Sex Fable," both of which were produced on Broadway, has been appointed to reorganize the French theater. Jane Painlevy is doing the same for the movies.

DANUBE PORT AT BULGAR LINE FALLS TO REDS

Russians Only 150 Miles from Yugoslavia.

LONDON, Sept. 2 [Saturday]—(AP). — Russian motorized troops speeding westward thru Romania toward a junction with Marshal Tito's Yugoslav army yesterday drove to within 150 miles of the Yugoslav frontier. Other Red forces reached Bulgaria's Danube border and seized a big river port 35 miles southwest of Bucharest.

This port is Giurgiu, terminus of a pipe line from the Ploesti oil fields, which are in Russian hands. Giurgiu, a city of 30,000, is headquarters of commerce between Romania and Bulgaria. It is two and a half miles across the Danube from Ruse [Ruschuk], Bulgarian port of 50,000 population. A train ferry connects the cities.

Gen. Ridion Y. Malinovsky's 2d Ukraine army swept thru more than 160 villages, fanning out west and south of Ploesti and south and east of Bucharest.

Reds Near Key to 4 Passes.

Soviet units striking toward the Predeal and Bazau passes above Ploesti were reported within 20 miles of Brasov, Transylvanian city on the other side of the Carpathian mountains, and key to four passes, in pursuit of the Nazi forces.

Field dispatches said most of the Germans were in disorderly flight westward thru the Danube valley toward the Iron Gate pass leading to Hungary and southern Germany.

Sixty-two miles southeast of Bucharest the Russians also reached the Bulgarian frontier with the occupation of Calarasi. One hundred other localities were taken in cleaning out an area between the Danube and the Bucharest-Constanta railway.

Nazis Predict New Blows.

Moscow said Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3d Ukraine army also occupied several localities southwest of Constanta, occupied Black sea port. His men already had reached the 1940 Bulgarian-Romanian frontier with the seizure of Caraomer.

The German agency Transocean said the Russians were regrouping along the entire eastern front and that massive new drives were in prospect soon.

A Romanian bulletin said that the Romanians had captured more than 50,000 Germans, including nine generals, in eight days.

Moscow said the Russians had captured a height in a thrust against the Germans near Praga, Warsaw suburb, and held it against a counter-attack.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

Berlin's army bulletin yesterday said:

"It has now been possible to stem the soviet summer offensive in front of our continuous line between the eastern Carpathians and the Gulf of Finland.

"In the last few days, too, all enemy attempts to gain new freedom of action in strong thrusts have been frustrated.

"In this fighting [since late in June] more than 4,200 enemy tanks and about 5,000 guns were destroyed and over 13,000 prisoners were taken.

"In the southern and eastern Carpathians, German and Hungarian formations yesterday smashed numerous soviet attacks.

"In the Vistula bridgehead west of Baranow our troops thrust deep into enemy positions. To the west of Anapol, a soviet bridgehead on the western bank of the Vistula was smashed.

"To the northeast of Warsaw, as well as between the Bug and Narew rivers, renewed soviet attacks with tanks and planes collapsed."

YANK BOMBERS BLAST NAZI GUNS GUARDING BREST

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—American dive bombers scored direct hits on German gun emplacements at Brest today and 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators roaring up from Italy attacked German supply or escape arteries in Hungary and Yugoslavia. Tonight, R. A. F. bombers attacked the German port of Bremen.

United States 15th air force Mustangs struck at a German airport at Debrecen, 120 miles east of Budapest, destroying many grounded aircraft. Only four enemy fighters were encountered in the air, and all of them were shot down.

Fortresses and Liberators struck at bridges and air fields in central Serbia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Italy.

In improved weather, hundreds of fighters swept across the channel from Britain, ranging into Belgium and Holland and blasting targets immediately ahead of the advancing allied armies.

SAVE WARSAW, PREMIER ASKS STALIN, F.D.R.

LONDON, Sept. 1 [Reuter]—The Polish prime minister, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, appealed in a broadcast today to Marshal Joseph Stalin, President Roosevelt, and Prime Minister Churchill for help for Warsaw.

"Do all you can," he said, "to provide means for further fighting and to liberate this city and the population fighting on her ruins, drenched with blood. These people fight and die for Poland but their desire to live for Poland is equally strong."

Speaking to Poland on the anniversary of the German attack on Poland, Mikolajczyk said:

"You may be sure that the Polish government will not capitulate and resign the rights of Poland to full independence, freedom, and sovereignty. I declare this is the full realization of the gravity of the tragic situation."

LST Serves as an Aircraft Carrier

Allies Smash Into Gothic Line

BOMBERS BLAST WAY FOR BRITISH INTO GOTHIC LINE

Defenses Pierced at 3 Points.

ROME, Italy, Sept. 1 (AP).—British troops, attacking behind a rolling barrage laid down by waves of fighter-bombers, have penetrated the German's Gothic line defenses at three points near the Adriatic coast, allied headquarters announced today. The advance of 1,000 yards was made thru a maze of strongpoints.

Monte Della Croce, described as a key point, was captured in the first rush of the British, and forward elements were reported fighting hand-to-hand on the slopes of Mount Calvo. Other British units were slashing forward within 1,000 yards of Monte Gridolfo, another fortified height.

[Capt. Ludwig Sertorious, German commentator, broadcast that the "whole wing of the British 8th army" was attacking between the Adriatic and the main ridge of the Apennines in a "serious attempt to force access to the Po plain." A British broadcast said Berlin was "already speaking of a full scale allied offensive in Italy, but there is no confirmation from headquarters."]

Nazi Tanks Counter-Attack.

At some points north of the Foglia river, which runs into the Adriatic near Pesaro, the Nazis were reported hurling tanks into repeated counter-attacks.

The strongpoint of Montecchio, west of Borgo Santa Maria, was captured, and tank supported British infantry pushed on and established itself inside the Gothic line defenses north of there.

Lynn Heinzerling, Associated Press correspondent at the front, reported:

"At three different places where 8th army troops bit into the line they found the Germans confused and unprepared. They apparently had expected an 8th army brand of artillery barrage to warn them of any hostile action."

Poles Fight Inside Port.

Headquarters said that Pesaro, Adriatic port, was divided between the Germans and the Poles and that fighting was in progress.

The navy announced that the British destroyers Loyal and Undine helped the Polish and British troops by bombarding Nazi gun positions.

An allied bulletin said significant gains also were made in the Florence area, near the center of the front.

Hear Swiss Bar Nazi Troops.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 1 (AP).—Stockholm political circles said today it was understood that the Germans had asked Switzerland what its reaction would be if part of Marshal Kesselring's armies in Italy withdrew into Switzerland. These sources said Switzerland gave an unfavorable reply.

[The German war bulletin said yesterday that German troops on the Adriatic were meeting "the strongest enemy attacks, the fury of which increased more and more."]

NAZIS PRESS CZECH PATRIOTS IN SMASH AT SLOVAK VALLEY

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Germans fighting Czech resistance forces are increasing pressure on a 56 mile line between Zilina and Trencin in an attempt to break thru and seize the Vah river valley in western Slovakia, a Czechoslovak buletin said today.

In the Vah valley run the important railroad from Bratislava to Zilina and two lines to northern and southern Moravia. The bulletin said two big armament factories are situated at Belusa and Povazska, in that area.

The bulletin added that Czechs had evacuated Kelmarok, eastern Slovakia, after heavy fighting, but recaptured Levoca. It announced the call-up of reserve troops to the patriot army.

BULGAR PEACE TALKS HALT AS CABINET FALLS

See Early Finn Break

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 1 (AP).—Reliable reports tonight said the Finnish government had under consideration the breaking of relations with Germany "within the next two or three days" as a step preliminary to negotiations for an armistice with Russia. The German legation here has been preparing to receive Nazi diplomatic personnel from Helsinki. Shipping quarters here said Finland's Baltic ships had been ordered to return at once to Finnish or Swedish ports. A Reuter's dispatch said the Finnish parliament had been called to meet at 6 p. m. tomorrow.

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Another axis government, that of Premier Ivan Bagrianov of Bulgaria, fell today, adding to the wreckage of Adolf Hitler's setup in the Balkans but temporarily suspending Bulgarian armistice talks in Cairo, Egypt.

A conversion among American and British diplomats and the two man Bulgarian peace mission took place before news of the cabinet's resignation was received.

Talks apparently will not be resumed until a new government is formed in Sofia. A report in Cairo said Bagrianov might form a leftist government to continue the armistice overtures.

The Bulgarian delegation is headed by Stoijan Moshanoff, former president of the parliament and a close friend of Bagrianov. The other member is Col. Zhelezkov, former military attache at Ankara, Turkey.

Premier Announces Fall.

Bagrianov broadcast from Sofia the announcement of the resignation of his 3 months old government, which recently tired and failed to wriggle out of the war into neutrality and then sent peace delegates to Cairo to sign an armistice with the allies.

The fallen cabinet will continue to administer affairs of state pending formation of a new government, Bagrianov said.

The Bulgarian cabinet was the fourth Danubian government to resign or be ejected since Aug. 23, when King Michael ousted Marshal Ion Antonescu and switched Romania to the side of the allies.

Resignation of the Bagrianov cabinet was announced amid widespread rumors that Hungary, where Doeme Sztojay's regime has just been supplanted by a new cabinet of geneals, was asking the allies for armistice terms. Reports of the death of Sztojay were denied by a German agency.

Puppet Croatia, on Hungary's southern border, had a new day old government trying to bolster the Nazi hold on that area. To the north, in Slovakia, another puppet regime was trying to maintain itself with German army help against a flare-up of revolt backed by Czechoslovak forces.

Report Sofia Reds Seized.

The German agency DNB reported from Sofia that "Communist street demonstrations" resulted in the arrest of many persons.

In Ankara, the Turkish foregin office ordered the internment of 310 German diplomats and 150 German civilians. They were to be exchanged for Turkish diplomats and civilians at the Bulgarian frontier, but no word has been received from the Turkish diplomats since they reached Vienna and there has been no news of Turkish civilians from Germany.

[Cairo reported indications were that German forces in Greece were being thinned in a reshuffle to cover railways into the occupied kingdom.]

MICHIGAN FLYER AMONG 10 DEAD IN PLANE CRASH

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 1 (AP).—Ten men were killed today in the crash of a B-24 bomber at Muroc army air base, Col. Gerald Hoyle, commander, announced.

Waukegan Flyer Hurt.

Meridian, Miss., Sept. 1 (AP).—Col. Harold Peterson, commanding officer at Key field, announced today that 2d Lt. Edward F. Riley, 21, of Elmhurst, N. Y., was killed in a collision of two planes near here yesterday. Lt. Thomas Pillifant, Waukegan, Ill., suffered a fractured leg when he bailed out, the announcement said. No other details were given.

[Lt. Pillifant, 20, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pillifant, 1418 N. Jackson st., Waukegan. A graduate of St. John's Military academy, he enlisted in the army two years ago.]

Tito's Forces Expected to Take Zagreb Shortly

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Marshal Tito's troops are operating at the gates of Zagreb, capital of the Germans' puppet Croat state, and capture of the city is expected shortly, according to a broadcast today from the Free Yugoslav radio. It said Bulgarian occupation forces were still resisting.

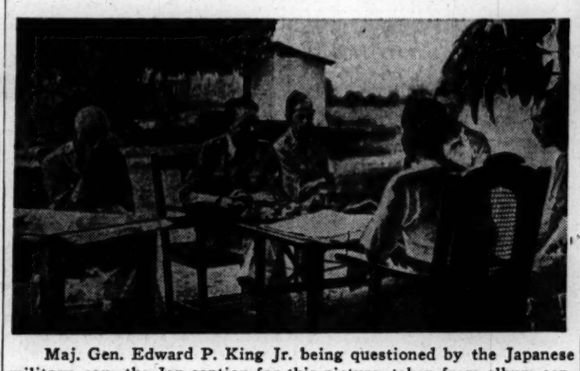
More Pictures from Jap War Album



Maj. Gen. Edward P. King Jr. being questioned by the Japanese military, says the Jap caption for this picture, taken from album captured in New Guinea and sent to America by Arthur Veysey, Tribune war correspondent.

REVEAL NEW U.S. AIR BASES ALONG PHILIPPINE ROAD

Flying Boats Pound Jap Shipping.

GENERAL HDQ., SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 2 [Saturday]—(AP). — Continuing attacks against shipping in the southwestern Pacific, Catalina flying boats sank one merchantman and damaged another at Celebes, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

The naval planes also hit many barges during the assault on the night of Aug. 29-30. More than 35 vessels have been bomb smashed in the Celebes area during August as allied airmen hit persistently at Jap communication lines.

Japanese planes ineffectively bombed new allied air strips at Sansapor, northwestern tip of New Guinea, last night. This announcement disclosed completion of air fields on that jungle tipped beachhead which the Americans occupied early in August.

A few days ago Gen. MacArthur announced a Jap raid on another new air field in that area, on nearby Middleburg Island, captured in the same operation as Sansapor. These fields lie some 200 miles southeast of Halmahera, southern guardian of the Philippines.

The raids ranged north to the Talaud Islands, about 200 miles south of Mindanao, in the southern Philippines. They included a blow by heavy units on Timor, where 45 tons of bombs were dropped on the Cape Chater air field.

At least five Jap vessels and 38 barges were destroyed or severely damaged by the assaults.

JAP RADIO SAYS FRENCH-GERMAN PACT CONTINUES

Broadcasts from enemy controled radio stations and news agencies, picked up yesterday in the United States and Britain included these interesting items:

The Japanese Domei agency quoted Pierre Laval as saying there is absolutely no change in the policy of Franco-German collaboration and that the moment when the collaborationists shall return to Paris is not far off.

A correspondent of Tokyo's Asahi Shimbun reported that Laval said in an interview that he had no intention of resigning, Domei said. Laval charged that the French people suffered a "severe blow" when the allies entered Paris, but promised that they would "recover soon."

The same correspondent gave a purported description of Marshal Henrè Petain's departure from Vichy Aug. 20, in which he denied that the marshal was forced to leave by the Nazis.

The German radio warned the German people that they must not stop fighting now. Von Ofen, a commentator from Berlin, said:

"At this time, if any single one of us falters the enemy will deal a death blow. Other people have fought on. Britain and the soviet union experienced a weakening at the knees but they did not give up. They gathered strength and continued to fight."

The Nazi DNB agency said that Gustav Behrens, controler of the German food estate, had appealed to German farmers to maintain production. He was quoted as saying:

"At the end of next year we must again be able to note the same incontestable success of German war food supplies as in the last years. The last man and last woman in the country must realize this will be more difficult than before, firstly, because every fit farm worker has had to join the fighting forces and, secondly, because the area from which the nation and army are supplied has grown smaller."

The start of a new wave of persecution of Hungarian Jews was indicated when DNB directed a dispatch to the German press saying that Miklos Bonczos, new Hungarian minister of the interior, had shortened by one hour the period in which the Jews of Budapest might move about the streets.

Chaplain Tarskey Feted for 26 Years in Army

Chaplain Col. Benjamin J. Tarskey, 63, was tendered a reception yesterday by 6th service command headquarters division directors, who presented him with a plaque in honor of his approaching retirement after 26 years of army service. Father Tarskey was born in Chicago Nov. 14, 1944, and formerly was assistant pastor of Visitation and All Saints churches before he became an army chaplain Aug. 8, 1918.

GENERAL GIVES MEDALS TO NINE WOUNDED VETS

Nine soldiers from Chicago and the Chicago area who were wounded in France, Italy, and the South Pacific were decorated with the Purple Heart yesterday at an outdoor ceremony at Vaughan General hospital, near Maywood. Brig. Gen. Percy J. Carroll, commanding officer, presented the medals.

The Chicagoans honored were Pvt. Michael W. Hanley, 21, 2712 Warren blvd., shot in the right hip and left arm; Pvt. Raymond P. Ambrose, 21, of 1836 W. 46th st., shot in the left arm; Pvt. Theodore J. Dlugosz, 25, of 1626 N. Paulina st., wounded in the head, and Pvt. Leo Solit, 23, of 1338 S. Lawndale av., shot in the left leg.

Others were Pvt. Sperandi Carani, 32, of 687 Central av., Highland Park, shot in the abdomen; Staff Sgt. Henry J. Krutsch, 28, of 816 Gardner av., Westchester, wounded in left leg; Pvt. Jacob H. Bennison, 22, of Kewanee, Ill., shot in the left hand; Pvt. Raymond Schroeder, 32, of Joliet, wounded on Saipan, in Marianas, and Tech. Sgt. Howard Hardrath, 27, of Unity, Wis., shot in left leg. Pvt. Carani was wounded in the Italian campaign; the others, except Pvt. Schroeder, were wounded in France.

RADIO IS STOLEN.
Thomas Lovell, 843 Wolfram st., reported to police yesterday that burglars stole a radio from his home.

EASING OF DRAFT POSSIBLE, SAYS REP. COSTELLO

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Chairman Costello [D., Cal.] of a house military draft subcommittee, said today he believed an immediate easing of draft calls is possible in view of selective service's estimate that at least 11,417,000 persons now are in uniform.

Costello said that would seem to indicate the fighting forces are "over the hump" and would need fewer men from now on.

The draft report was submitted to senate and house military committees by Col. Francis V. Keesling Jr., legislative liasion representative for selective service, who said nothing of any reduction of draft calls.

Feel Needs Exceeded.

The house military committee released Keesling's report without comment, but several members said privately it confirmed their suspicion that there have been inducted an estimated 2 million more men than were necessary.

Keesling said current draft policies should be adequate for at least the rest of this year—barring military upsets.

Most Men Over 26 Safe.

Should future induction calls remain constant, few men over 26 will be drafted the remainder of this year, Keesling said. Current policies are concentrated on the group under 26, and in July 83 per cent of all inductees were men between 18 and 26, Keesling said.

The navy announced recently it has an overall strength of 3,717,000, and the army earlier attained an overall strength of 7,700,000. On the basis of those figures, it could be assumed the army and navy personnel aggregate not less than 11,417,000, Keesling said.

COMING HOME, MISSING PILOT CABLES PARENTS

Lt. R. A. Hoegh Jr., 21, of 1025 Parkside av., who was reported missing June 14, cabled his parents yesterday that he would be home in three weeks, his father reported. At the same time, the father added, he received a confirmation from the war department that his son was seen bailing out of his disabled ship near Melun, France.

Lt. Hoegh was serving as the group navigator for a squadron of B-17 bombers at the time he was reported missing. He holds the air medal and five oak leaf clusters and a citation from Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle for his participation in shuttle bombing raids.

EVACUATE 1,101 YANKEE FLYERS FROM ROMANIA

Freed Prisoners Fly to Base in Italy.

Chicagoan Seized in a Hurry.

Officers and enlisted men alike were loaded down with souvenirs such as iron crosses and Romanian military caps.

The man with the shortest combat record was 2d Lt. Robert H. Minervini of 6103 Winthrop av., Chicago, who said: "I left the United States May 10 and was a prisoner of war May 31."

Other Chicagoans in the party included Sgt. Leroy M. Haug of 1343 Newport av., Lt. William F. Karlovitz of 18 N. Harding av., and Staff Sgt. Edward J. Hein of 5304 S. Artesian av.

[Six Chicagoans and two other airmen from Illinois were among those freed from internment, according to other dispatches reaching Chicago. They were identified as Lt. Henry A. Lasco of 1625 N. Mango av., 2d Lt. Joseph F. Kill of 4251 Wentworth av., Lt. Theodore Hellin of 4821 Byron st., Sgt. Joseph Brown of 8107 Luella av., Sgt. James Seldak of 7802 S. May st., and Corp. Edward G. Carmody of 7607 S. Green st., all of Chicago, and Lewis Hagen and George Young of Illinois.]

Milwaukeean Also Saved.

Some of the men brought back were survivors of the famous low level attack made Aug. 1, 1943. They told harrowing tales of sailing over the target less than 200 feet off the ground, dumping their bombs and then being knocked down by flak.

Staff Sgt. Bernard G. Troudt of 2007 6th st., Milwaukee, Wis., a turret gunner, said his ship was shot out from under him while flying only 150 feet above the ground. He bailed out into a creek, without injury.

Hoosier Raises Old Glory.

On the other hand Staff Sgt. Charles Bridges of Anderson, Ind., a waist gunner in a Liberator and the only survivor of his ship, said his landing stunned him so badly he was unconscious 33 days and was ill many weeks. But he has been fully recovered for six months and is enjoying the best health of his life.

When the Romanians capitulated Aug. 23 the first thing the American flyer prisoners did was to cut down the barbed wire around their schoolhouse prison and run up a United States flag.

The flag was brought back to Italy by Capt. Floyd I. Robinson of Indianapolis, Ind., who said he had received it in a Red Cross package.

The man whose daring exploit made the flyers' liberation possible was Lt. Col. James A. Gunn III. of Kelseyville, Cal., who had hidden in the fuselage of a German Messerschmitt 109 and been flown out to safety by the ace of the Romanian air force, Capt. Carl Cantacuzino, who was credited with shooting down 64 allied planes before his country renounced the axis.

Chicagoans on Rescue Planes.

ROME, Sept. 1 (AP).—The first two Fortresses which landed at Bucharest to begin the rescue of interned American airmen had to fight thru terrific anti-aircraft barrages when they landed on Aug. 29, while only Romanian forces were holding the capital against the Germans.

Crewmen on these planes included Tech. Sgts. Benjamin Audie of 6508 S. May st. and T. J. Wright of 553 N. Parkside av., both of Chicago; Capt. Edgar O. Hughes, flight surgeon of Washington, Ill.; Capt. Marshall Hanson of Ludington, Mich., and Tech. Sgt. William Aspengren of Des Moines, Ia.

REPORT 90 PCT. OF ASIA INVASION FORCE IS INDIAN

NEW DELHI, India, Sept. 1 [Reuter].—Ninety per cent of the personnel of the invasion forces trained for the coming assault on Japanese occupied Asia are Indian. Volunteers have been obtained from the Indian army because the Indian navy could not supply all the men necessary.

Under the guidance of the instructors of the royal Indian navy the trainees have become first class sailors, providing crews for landing craft and forming beach parties.

The lessons learned from the combined operations in Madagascar, North Africa, Italy, and Normandy are being studied and applied by officers and noncommissioned officers who took part in those operations.

F. D. R.-CHURCHILL MEET IN QUEBEC REPORTED NEAR

Visit to Europe for Vote Purpose Hinted.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are to meet shortly for a conference on the conclusion of the war in Europe and on plans to press the war in the Pacific to early defeat of Japan, it was widely reported in the capital today.

News reports from London said the conference would be in all likelihood be held in Quebec, where the two met a year ago. There was no official acknowledgment or denial of the report.

At the same time reports that Mr. Roosevelt will go to Europe before election day and possibly cast an absentee ballot for himself were revived despite White House and state department denials of two weeks ago.

Ace Political Card Hinted.

In political circles it was believed that a trip to London and Paris is the ace political card Mr. Roosevelt has up his sleeve for the fourth term campaign.

The London reports indicated that another session of Churchill and Roosevelt with Dictator Stalin will follow Germany's final capitulation, at which they would take up the matter of Russia's participation in the war against Japan. In Britain it was considered probable that Stalin would take his time about making a stand against Tokyo, especially since Japan has stationed some of her best troops on the soviet union's eastern border.

Problems of Pacific War.

Roosevelt and Churchill are expected to consider the Russian factors when they hold their next meeting.

They are expected also to take up such problems as where to concentrate the attack against Japan and the proportionate numbers of American and British forces and matters of the vast military supplies, according to the reports from London.

The President's health is, and has been since last December when it was first known he was ailing, one of the major issues of the campaign. The President is studied by every visitor and each new photograph provokes curbstone diagnosis thruout the country.

Fear Strain Too Great.

Many competent observers feel Mr. Roosevelt could not weather the rigors of catch as catch can political campaign with the youthful, alert Gov. Dewey, the Republican candidate. They feel the President, therefore, must plead he is too busy to campaign or must go in for something spectacular but not taxing, such as a visit to Europe.

With a long sea voyage to give him a rest before his arrival in Europe and nothing more strenuous than auto riding and conferring on a European schedule, such a junket would be a vacation rather than a campaign, observers said.

The more immediate visit with Churchill is expected to be a smaller and shorter conference than that a year ago when some 400 British and 200 American experts formed the staffs of the leaders. The talks are expected to be purely military with reports going to Stalin on European decisions and to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on Pacific decisions.

Pray for Freedom in Poland

HINTS AT PARLEY SOON TO FORM PEACE AGENCY

France May Receive Major Seat.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—The possibility of a full dress meeting of the allied nations in November to draw up a world peace agency was raised today on the basis of speedy development of the exploratory big-power conferences at the Dumbarton Oaks estate in Georgetown, Va.

At the same time Secretary of State Hull gave a boost to the prospect of France's eventual reemergence as a major power with the possibility of a permanent seat on the top council of any peace organization that may be set up.

Michael McDermott, official American spokesman for the Dumbarton Oaks conferees, was authority for the statement that their work had progressed so far it seemed likely a general meeting by mid-November might be possible. The public discussion promised by President Roosevelt and Hull will come during the last month of the election campaign.

Multilateral Treaty Proposed.

There seems little doubt that under present plans the proposed world organization would be based on a multilateral treaty signed by all members.

Against that background, Hull commented at his news conference, without details, that this government is for the development of a strong France. It appears likely that developments of the next few months, indicating the chances for a stable post-war French government, will influence the country's final position.

Armour May Head Mission.

Meanwhile it was learned that Norman Armour, former United States ambassador to Argentina, is being considered as the first American chief of mission to liberated Paris.

Selden Chapin, who has been American charge d'affaires in Algiers, is moving to Paris and will represent this country at Gen. Charles De Gaulle's seat of government until a chief of mission is chosen.

Plans are also being formulated to reopen an American consulate general in Paris in about a month.

Fifth Anniversary

Chicagoans prayed for the early restoration of freedom in Poland yesterday in services which marked the fifth anniversary of the invasion of that country by the Nazi.

Prayer shawls were worn by almost 1,000 at the Chicago Loop Orthodox synagog, 16 S. Clark st., during a morning memorial service. More than 2,300 of the 8,900 members of the synagog are of direct Polish descent. In addition to prayers for the thousands of men and women who lost their lives during the rule of oppression, the group, which included almost 100 children, prayed for the homeless children of occupied countries.

The gallantry of the Poles was praised by Rabbi Elias Gamze, who said their spirit had not been broken by five years of privation. The chief memorial anniversary service of the Polish National Catholic church will be held Sunday morning at the All Saints' cathedral, altho nine such services were held yesterday, Bishop Leon Grochowski said. Special prayers were also said in a number of Catholic churches of the archdiocese with approval of Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch.

DIRKSEN TELLS WHAT HE SAID ABOUT F.D.R. TRIP

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Rep. Dirksen [R., Ill.] told the house today that the speech he made Wednesday in Old Orchard, Me., wasn't exactly the same as that released by the Republican national committee.

Dirksen said he did not call President Roosevelt's bid for a fourth term a political try "under false pretenses" nor did he accuse him of using the navy to further his campaign.

Instead, said Dirksen, he reworded it to say that no man should seek the Presidency under a pretense and he simply related the circumstances of the President's Pacific trip.

Dirksen's explanation moved Majority Leader McCormack to ask permission to strike from the record his criticism of the Dirksen speech.

SEDITION TRIAL ATTORNEYS ASK FOR PROTECTION

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 [Special].—Two motions filed in District court late today by sedition trial attorneys asked the court: 1. To protect Defendant Gerald B. Winrod against inflammatory and prejudicial public utterances to the press of Prosecutor O. John Rogge. 2. To protect defense attorneys against acts of lawlessness endangering their lives as the result of "prejudices" deliberately aroused by certain persons connected with the case.

The Winrod motion quoted Rogge's statement in open court that "the government does not wish any one to take any position with reference to the trial" and that issuance of any statement was "improper, whether amounting to contempt or not."

The motion then quoted a number of utterances by Rogge to the press which included the statement "I have done everything I could except hire a public relations expert."

Cites Attacks on Counsel.

The second motion was filed by W. Hobart Little who described himself as a court appointed defense attorney without compensation for the last 17 months.

Little said a bullet was fired thru his auto windshield Aug. 15 while he was en route home with another defense attorney. He called the court's attention to an attack on a third attorney, William J. Powers, in New York recently, and asked full investigation and police protection for all defense counsel.

Little's motion also charged that "certain so-called yellow journals of wide circulation thruout the United States, to wit: Chicago Sun, Daily Worker, New Masses, and others, repeatedly and continually have published articles setting forth violent criticisms of the conduct of the defense and have prosecuted a deliberate campaign of publicity directed towards inflaming the passions of the lawless, ignorant and un-American element."

Point to Lawless Acts.

These same publications, Little charged, have incited such persons to acts of lawlessness and sedition directed against defendants and counsel.

The motion also charged that "a certain radical and irresponsible radio commentator who uses the alias, Walter Winchell, has for many months prosecuted a violent and relentless campaign of defamation and villification against such defendants and that certain radical and irresponsible newspaper columnists such as Drew Pearson have participated in the above campaign."

MRS. DOUGLAS AVERS UNRRA IS NO SANTA CLAUS

Emily Taft Douglas, Democratic candidate for congressman at large, declared last night that the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration is a plan to help Europe produce "an honest living" and does not mean that the United States intends to play Santa Claus to Europe. She spoke at a meeting in Aurora sponsored by the Independent Voters, Inc.

"European agriculture fell off only 5 to 10 per cent because of the efficiency of the Nazis," Mrs. Douglas said.

She assailed her Republican opponent, Rep. Stephen A. Day, because, she said, he has nothing in his platform about international coöperation.

TALE OF F.D.R.'S DOG IS BRANDED FALSE IN HOUSE

Deny Warship Made Trip for Pet.

BY LAURENCE BURD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—Falla, President Roosevelt's Scottie, was in the spotlight on Capitol hill again today, as House Majority Leader McCormack [D., Mass.] denied reports that a naval destroyer was diverted from battle duty and sent 1,000 miles to the Aleutian Islands to fetch the White House pet.

The report which McCormack elaborately denounced as false was given to the house yesterday by Rep. Knutson [R., Minn.]. Knutson told the house he had heard rumors the dog was inadvertently left behind in the Aleutians on the President's return from his recent Pacific cruise and was picked up by a destroyer sent from Seattle, Wash.

McCormack told the house he had asked Adm. Leahy, the President's personal chief of staff, about this report and about another statement by Knutson that the President was escorted by a "flotilla of battleships, cruisers, and destroyers" on his Pacific jaunt.

Calls Reports Untrue.

Adm. Leahy termed both reports untrue, said McCormack, who diverted for a moment to pay tribute to President Roosevelt for his affection for dogs.

"We know that Falla is the President's dog," said McCormack. "A lot of people in this country have dogs they love, and a lot of people admire the President for his affection for his dog.

"Adm. Leahy informed me the dog was never lost; it was never sent for, and could not have been sent for because it was never lost at any time during the trip."

Knutson said that, "knowing the President's affinity for dogs," he had presumed the report of Falla's rescue was well founded. He predicted the "full truth will come out in due time."

Trip Made on Cruiser.

McCormack said the chief executive made the Pacific trip on a cruiser and, quoting Adm. Leahy as authority, specifically denied that any other "battleships or cruisers" were involved.

Knutson promptly noted that the denial "very carefully" refrained from mentioning "destroyers and aircraft carriers."

The Minnesota Republican also quoted published reports estimating the cost of the President's excursion at 20 million dollars and observed this estimate has not been challenged or denied.

Knutson further said a recent plane trip to Australia by "a certain very high placed American woman"—an apparent refernce to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt—took 43,000 gallons of gasoline at a time when farmers and motorists were being severely rationed at home. The plane, he said, was a bomber that had been remodeled to include a shower bath. This said Knutson, "did not sit well" with motorists getting two gallons of gasoline a week.

Bandits Get $390, Coupons for 3,000 Gallons of Gas

Stanley Brantner, 19, of 5434 N. Kilbourn av., manager of the gasoline filling station at 4001 Ainslie st., was held up by two bandits last night and robbed of $390 and ration coupons worth 3,000 gallons.

POPE PIUS CALLS FOR NEW ORDER AT WAR'S CLOSE

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 1 (AP).—Pope Pius XII appealed in a world broadcast today for a peace founded on Christian principles ,acknowledged that the use of force might be necessary to prevent future wars and, altho defending the right of private property, condemned a capitalism that "arrogates to itself an unlimited right over property."

"The threat of the sword may appear inevitable even after the conclusion of peace," the pope said, "in order to safeguard within legally necessary and morally justified limits the observance of just obligations and prevent attempts at new conflicts."

Help Asked for Italy.

He made a special appeal in behalf of Italy, fighting against "misery, famine, unemployment and economic unrest" and said "prompt and effective remedies" were needed.

Most of the address dwelt on the economic world to come after the end of the "tremendous tragedy," when he said men expect far reaching betterment of economic and social conditions.

But he warned that the promises of many statesmen and experts had given rise in the victims of unhealthy social orders to "illusory hopes of a complete rebirth of the world and to an over-enthusiastic expectation of a millenium of universal happiness."

Property Rights Limited.

The pope said such ideas offered "fertile ground for the propaganda of the most radical programs, disposes men's minds to . . . unreasonable and unjustified impatience which . . . puts all its hopes in upheavals and violence."

Asserting that the "Christian conscience cannot admit as just a social order which either denies in principle or renders impossible or negatory in practice the natural right to property," the pontiff declared that neither could it accept "unlimited right over property," permitting immense riches to dominate public and private economic life.

The pope said the state should have the right to regulate or even expropriate property where it is against the public welfare, and "where big business even today shows itself more productive there should be given the possibility of tempering the labor contract with a contract of co-ownership."

JAPS GAIN IN DRIVE TO ENTRAP CHINESE MENACING HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, China, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Chinese high command indicated today that Japanese forces had made considerable progress in their attempt to trap crack Chinese forces threatening the key city of Hengyang from the southwest. An army spokesman, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, said the Japanese drive was aimed against Chinese forces astride the Hunan-Kwangsi railway southwest of Hengyang.

The high command admitted the fall of Lishui in Chekiang province, which the Japanese evidently thought was a site for a new bomb-Japan air base, a false impression. In Hupeh province, severe fighting was raging in the Yangtze port of Ichang and on the outskirts of Tangyang, 27 miles to the northeast.

SEIZED WITH 30 STOLEN LETTERS IN HIS POCKETS

John W. Grace, 28, of Seneca, La Salle county, was arrested yesterday by police at 70th st. and Emerald av. with 30 pieces of stolen mail in his pockets. Police said he admitted he had stolen checks worth $150 from mailboxes and said he was wanted in Seneca for a similar offense. He said he was seized by Joliet authorities last Saturday but escaped when they left him alone in a room for a moment. Police said he told them he was released seven months ago after serving three years in the penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind., for stealing from mailboxes. He will be turned over to postal inspectors.

FEWER AUTOS IN CITY, STICKER SALES REVEAL

The sales of city motor vehicle tax stickers during the first eight months of 1944 indicates that fewer automobiles are operating in Chicago than in the first eight months of 1943, Mathias P. Bauler, city collector, said yesterday. The sale of licenses for passenger cars alone dropped from 467,423 in the first eight months of 1943 to 428,655 during the comparable period this year. Revenue collected by the office this year totals $4,513,372, against $4,765,396 in the same period last year.

GLOBAL RUBBER DEALS SEEN AS INDUSTRY PERIL

Old Monopoly Seeks to Stop Synthetics.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—Increased pressure from abroad to compel United States coöperation with a revived international rubber monopoly was anticipated today by congressional leaders. Such a campaign, they warned, would threaten the synthetic rubber industry this country has built during the war.

Details of this threat, and the loss to America and Americans should it materialize, are found in the records of the rubber director's office which was dissolved last night with its routine tasks assigned today to a branch of the war production board.

The resigning director, Bradley Dewey, in bidding good-bye to Washington today, said he wanted to avoid any statement that might be interpreted as partisan politics. He added, however, that no international agreements should throttle the war born rubber industry.

Old Monopoly Active.

The director's office was not represented in an American delegation that participated in an international rubber conference a few months ago in London.

The details of this conference are still clouded in secrecy but it leaked out that the British and Dutch, who enjoyed a near monopoly before the war, were dickering for a return of their rubber market. More than 50 per cent of this market was in the United States.

The rubber director's office had no part in the dumping of more than 5 billion American dollars into the Central and South Americas for rubber development. The RFC Rubber Development corporation alone spent 12 million dollars in two years to aid in procuring 61,000 tons of rubber. This is at a rate of 89 cents a pound as compared with synthetic manufacturing costs as low as 13 cents a pound.

Dewey categorically opposed and still opposes a suggestion voiced by Vice President Wallace several months ago that it might be advisable for America to shut down synthetic plants to promote international trade.

Wallace, who was a recent luncheon guest at the White House, has several influential and ardent followers in the New Deal, who hold a theory that America by spending a quarter of a billion dollars a year for imported rubber can make these dollars available for the bushmen to buy exported American products.

Military needs Considered.

Dewey, a colonel of chemical warfare in the first World war, in advocating the perpetuity of the synthetic operation, has in mind the future military strength of America as well as the welfare of the public in a peace time economy.

He is insistent that this country should not be dependent in any future war upon a rubber supply 8,000 miles from the United States. For those who have advocated that the synthetic plants be maintained idle while resuming the foreign trade in rubber, Dewey's records include estimates of rapid deterioration of the manufacturing facilities in nonuse even with high maintenance expenditures.

Furthermore Dewey's office records of pre-war rubber production indicate that the international financial interests of London and Wall st. would benefit more than the jungle workers from any artificial suppression of the synthetic production. Even in the heydays of plantation development in the Southwest Pacific, it was the rubber market operators who got rich and not the slave labor imported to the unhealthful jungles from India and China.

Synthetic Able to Compete.

The synthetic production in America will create a ceiling on all rubber prices, unless artificially controlled. When the Japs are driven from the captured plantations that produced 90 per cent of the pre-war rubber, the old Dutch-British rubber cartel will never again be able to rig world prices, unless America should enter trade agreements to its own economic disadvantage on some New Deal theory of international political advantage, business leaders assert.

"The investment of three quarters of a billion dollars of taxpayers money in the synthetic industry," said Dewey, "has been successful in preventing a collapse of arms production and of domestic transportation in war time owing to a rubber shortage. The benefits of this investment should, must, and will be extended into peace time. With no artificial barriers, synthetic will be able to compete with natural rubber in peace time on a price and quality basis."

More about these peace time benefits will be discussed in a subsequent article.

On his final day in Washington as a war time official, the first to resign with his job completed, Dewey today issued an optimistic report on tire production, which has been retarded not because of the rubber supply problem now whipped, but because the war man power commission has not manned tire factories adequately.

The report said the tire production rate has been improving so it can now be predicted that all B and C card holders will be able to get passenger car rubber this fall and winter.

'SHOT FROM SKY' SHOWS RUIN OF ENEMY'S HOPES

Display of Wrecked Planes Opens.

The army air forces' "Shot from the Sky" exhibit, which consists of captured German and Japanese planes, plane parts, and equipment, opened yesterday at the Congress st. plaza in Grant park. It will remain open thru Tuesday. Admission is free and the hours are 2 to 10 p. m., with special entertainment at 3:30 and 7:30 daily.

Most of the exhibit represents the wreckage of war and the ruin of German and Japanese hopes. There are hundreds of parts of enemy planes—wings, rudders, guns, tiny electrical devices—which were gathered up after the planes had plunged to earth. They are exhibited just as they were found—battered, bullet riddled, and charred.

Sheriff Mulcahy Speaks.

Sheriff Mulcahy, representing Mayor Kelly, told the opening night audience that the show emphasizes the importance of Chicago as a war industry center. He urged Chicagoans to coöperate in keeping war plants manned to capacity. Other speakers were Col. Nelson S. Talbott, commanding officer of the air forces materiel command of the mid-central procurement district; Leverett S. Lyon, executive office of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and George Williamson, member of the labor management committee of the war man power commission. More than 44,000 visited the show, it was estimated.

There is a Focke-Wulf 190, German fighter plane, with the sinister black cross of the Luftwaffe on its wings, and one of the dreaded Messerschmitt 110s which was captured in Africa practically unharmed. The Focke-Wulf was flown to Chicago from Dayton, O. Its 1,600 horse power engine is started at intervals at the show and the members of the woman's army corps who accompany the exhibit explain the plane's operation.

Flying Suit Shown.

Other items on exhibit include a droppable gasoline tank, radio equipment, a flying suit, and a parachute.

The show has the coöperation of the treasury department and is sponsored by the Chicago Association of Commerce in the interest of bond sales, WAC and AAF enlistment, and war worker recruitment. Visitors buying a $25 bond are given a free ride in the army's Link trainer.

Bellhop Dies of Burns in Fire from Spilled Gas

J. D. Foley, 50, died yesterday in County hospital of burns suffered in a fire Thursday night at the State House, a hotel at 735 S. State st. The fire started when gasoline spilling from an overturned trailer tank washed into the basement of the hotel. Foley, a bellhop at the hotel, first fled from the building to safety, but returned and was caught in the blaze.

SON TELLS HOW PLANE KILLED WOMAN IN BOAT

Selfridge Field, Mich., Sept. 1 [Special].—The formation of army training planes that zoomed low over a Michigan resort lake and killed an elderly woman was described by the victim's son today as having "come at us like bullets" after he had waved his hat to them in a friendly gesture.

Walter G. Meyer, a retail merchant of Madeira, O., told an army court martial trial board of the sudden descent of death from the skies as he and his mother, Mrs. Mary Meyer, 72, were quietly fishing Aug. 2 on Lake Margrethe, at which they were vacationing.

Leader Held Responsible.

Altho testimony has indicated Mrs. Meyer was struck by the propeller of one of two planes piloted by Free French trainees, Wassing is held responsible as their leader.

Meyer said that he had rowed the boat to the middle of the lake at about 11 a. m., that his mother had just caught a fish, and that he was rebaiting her hook when he first saw the planes approaching. They were then far away and he pointed them out to his mother.

"I saw the center plane nose down slightly toward the water," Meyer testified. "The planes on each side did the same. I took off my hat and waved to them. My mother was seated in the front of the boat and I was standing in the back.

"The planes continued to come at us like bullets. They came so close and so fast that I dropped to the bottom of the boat. There was a tremendous swish, I felt a rush of air and there was a loud report as if some one had fired a shotgun. I didn't see mother move. It all happened in about 10 seconds."

After the planes had passed, Meyer said, he first believed his mother had fainted. Then he discovered that she was dead and realized that she had been struck by one of the planes. It had been disclosed previously that her body was almost cut in two.

A Motorboat Menaced.

The Meyer rowboat was towed to shore by the motorboat of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Clough of Detroit, who narrowly escaped injury when the planes flew so low over their craft that the windshield on their boat was smashed.

If convicted, Lt. Wassing faces a maximum penalty of three years imprisonment at hard labor on the charge of negligence and a dishonorable discharge and whatever additional penalty the trial board sees fit to impose on the charge of reckless flying.

OPA Starts Mailing Out B-5 and C-5 Gas Coupons

The office of price administration central issue office yesterday began mailing out B-5 and C-5 gasoline ration coupons, good for five gallons each, Rae E. Walters, regional administrator, said. Starting today, the OPA will issue the new E-2 and R-2 coupons for nonhighway gasoline, used largely on farms. E, E-1, R, and R-1 coupons will not be issued any more. However, all B-3, C-3, all E and R coupons will remain valid indefinitely, Walters said.

MR. TRUMAN ACCEPTS.

Sen. Truman in his speech accepting the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination no doubt foreshadowed the appeal which his party will make to the voters this autumn. At any rate the Republicans can hope so because Mr. Truman's argument answers itself.

Mr. Roosevelt must have a fourth term, Sen. Truman says, because of his skill and experience in diplomacy and because of his intimate acquaintance with Mr. Churchill, Mr. Stalin, and sundry other potentates. The Republicans can welcome this kind of talk as they welcomed Mr. Truman's article about Pearl Harbor. That indiscretion brought into the campaign the question of Mr. Roosevelt's responsibility as commander in chief for the fact that our ships were sitting ducks in Hawaii when the Japs arrived. Mr. Truman's acceptance speech invites attention to the whole record of Roosevelt diplomacy.

That surely is not a story of success because the prime purpose of diplomacy is or should be to settle controversies without resort to war. Mr. Roosevelt failed to do that and, in fact, from the day of his speech dedicating the Outer bridge in Chicago, didn't even try.

Had he tried he might not have succeeded, but the fourth termers don't offer this excuse for him because it is their story that he is a superman who can accomplish anything he undertakes. That is the Roosevelt myth which they do not dare undermine.

Mr. Truman's speech calls attention to the fact that Mr. Roosevelt did not keep the country out of war and, more especially, to the fact that his diplomacy maneuvered the country toward war while he was protesting his devotion to peace. Because of this false pretense no adequate preparations were made for fighting the war. Pearl Harbor is one chapter in the story. There are many others that will be developed as the campaign proceeds, including, notably, the fact that if congress had adjourned as Mr. Roosevelt wished it to do in the summer of 1940 the defense appropriations would have been even more inadequate than they were.

Mr. Roosevelt's diplomacy which Mr. Truman says is so skilful that the country can't do without it did not spare us the necessity of fighting two wars at once.

It would be interesting to know what Mr. Roosevelt's alleged intimate acquaintance with Mr. Churchill and Mr. Stalin has got us. Mr. Churchill took advantage of the friendship to write the Atlantic Charter out of existence and Mr. Stalin was allowed to have his way in Poland as a token of Mr. Roosevelt's friendship. But what did America get from either England or Russia?

In truth, the whole argument turning on Mr. Roosevelt's unique friendship with the allied leaders is silly. There isn't likely to be anything which Mr. Roosevelt knows about these men and how to deal with them that is not readily available in the files of the state department and in the minds of its permanent staff; and surely it is not Mr. Truman's intention to say that in defeat Mr. Roosevelt would withhold any information of this sort from his successful opponent.

The Republicans will welcome Mr. Truman's acceptance speech because it invites a comprehensive examination of Mr. Roosevelt's conduct of our foreign affairs in all its ineptitude, all its sycophancy, and all its secret betrayal of pledges given by Mr. Roosevelt to the American people.

THE REDS NOMINATE SOME DEMOCRATS.

The Communist controled American Labor party picked as its Presidential electors in New York state this year the same slate nominated by the Democrats. John J. O'Connor, chairman of the executive committee of the American Democratic national committee, a group opposing the fourth term, has asked the Democratic electors to decline the dishonor of the A. L. P. nomination.

The A. L. P., which is owned and operated by Browder, Hillman, and the rest of the Communist high command, claims a strength in New York state of around 400,000 votes. If the Democratic electors join up with the Commies to put this bloc of votes on ice the Democratic party is going to lose a far larger number of the votes of decent Americans elsewhere in the country. The electors don't need a Jim Farley to tell them that all the New York Communists will vote for the Democratic ticket for Roosevelt if they can't vote the A. L. P. ticket. After all, who ever did more for them and for the soviet, Joe Stalin not excepted?

REAL TAX REFORM.

Mr. Arthur R. Kaiser who handles the tax accounts of Sears, Roebuck & Co. delivered a thoughtful address at the recent tax conference of the National Association of Chambers of Commerce meeting in Denver. He said the federal government should have its sources of revenue and listed them, and the state and local governments should have theirs and listed them. Overlapping, he argued, should be eliminated. Students of taxation may find fault with some of his details but there can be little quarrel with the general principle that he put forward.

Of course, nothing much is likely to be accomplished as long as government expenditures continue at the present rate or anything like it. Almost any of the ordinary taxes on income, sales, or property is tolerable if applied in moderation. Duplication is an evil to be corrected, but it cannot be avoided if, as is true today, the federal government takes 50 billions a year from the citizens. It can do that only by squeezing every dime it can from nearly every available source. The federal treasury will continue to invade the traditional fields of state and local taxation as long as the pressure of expenditures remains.

The federal government now is spending a hundred billion dollars a year and from the casual remarks of the New Dealers it seems fair to conclude that if they are returned to power the annual bill after the war will run to 25 billions or more, exclusive of social security. Even the Ruml-Sonne plan which was put forward as a business men's proposal, assumed an annual burden of 18 billions after the war.

Prof. Harley Lutz of Princeton remarked recently that "a good case can be made for a federal budget [after the war] of no more than 11 to 12 billion dollars" exclusive of social security and debt retirement. In view of advancing prices and the duty of caring for disabled veterans 11 billions may be the lowest practicable goal. At any rate, as Prof. Lutz says:

"The key to a happy and sensible solution [of the post-war tax problem] is moderation but there can be no moderation in expenditures if the federal government is to be regarded as a source of bounty for every one who has a little trouble with his own finances. If the aids and grants and bonuses and subsidies were cleaned out and kept out of the federal budget there could be such moderation in taxes as would make almost any post-war program acceptable and feasible, with liberal room for debt retirement beside."

THE PHILLIPS CASE.

William Phillips, former American ambassador to Italy, whose principal duties in recent months have been those of diplomatic adviser to Gen. Eisenhower, has tendered his resignation and is coming home. The circumstances substantiate Sen. Chandler's charge in the senate that Mr. Phillips was, in effect, ousted because he sent a confidential report to President Roosevelt saying that we were getting little assistance from India in the war against Japan and that no more can be expected unless the British promise India independence.

Mr. Phillips had been United States minister to India and still retains that title technically while he is working in Great Britain with Gen. Eisenhower. This would have given the British the shadow of an excuse to declare that he was persona non grata to their government. They deny that any such formal action was taken, but it is apparent that things were made so difficult and unpleasant for Phillips that he chose to quit.

Rep. Calvin Johnson of Illinois has charged that two British diplomatic representatives in this country, Girja Shankar Bajpai, minister from India, and Ronald Campbell, who as minister extraordinary is the No. 2 man in the British embassy, have engaged in an active campaign in this country to smear Phillips and to prevent American newspapers from publishing his views. Mr. Johnson demanded that our government declare the two ministers to be persona non grata, an obviously futile suggestion in view of the British domination of our state department.

What purported to be Phillips' letter to the President was printed some weeks ago by the columnist Drew Pearson. The substance of it has been verified since by more respectable and responsible newspaper men, as well as by members of congress. In tracing the causes for the scant support given by India to the war against Japan Mr. Phillips observed that the Indian army is a purely mercenary force and that the morale of its officers was a matter of serious concern to Gen. Stilwell. Only independence could bring about any substantial assistance against the Japanese by the Indian people, he reported.

The British action against Mr. Phillips, whether official or unofficial, is the height of presumption. His duties were those of adviser to an American general. His offense was that of giving the President of the United States, whom he represents, a truthful, factual report of the defective statesmanship of one of our allies which is making it more difficult and costly for us to fight the war. Mr. Phillips is sacrificed because he would not abjure his allegiance to his own country and make himself an agent of British propaganda and misinformation.

In the larger sense, of course, the British action against Mr. Phillips is as stupid as the whole Indian policy from which it stems. Getting Phillips' scalp because he told the truth about India will not change the facts. The British have made it clear that they expect the armed power of the United States to recover their sullen empire for them, but that they have no intention whatever of reforming the abuses that made their subject peoples sullen and unwilling to defend the British rule.

As long as the British look to us as the principal defender of their empire Americans have a right to demand that the British remedy these abuses. Mr. Roosevelt's colonial subservience disgusts the American people more and more as the facts, such as those in the Phillips case, continue to pile up.

Editorial of the Day

THAT LIVID LOOK IS DE RIGUEUR.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Women's slacks have been given the stop signal by a Parisian fashion designer, Henri de Chatillon. When he sees a pair of them on a woman, says M. de Chatillon, he becomes "simply sick all over," he feels "positively livid."

This is—as the French say so eloquently—as it may be. Slacks are slacks, and M. de Chatillon is M. de Chatillon, and never the twain shall meet. But if the gentleman proposes to set a precedent for gentlemen to feel sick all over and turn positively livid on viewing women's wear that does not please them, it begins to look like a long hard winter, spring, summer, and autumn in the fashion designing game.

Many Americans with the invasion in southern France will have a unique experience. For the first time, they will actually win at Monte Carlo.—Washington Evening Star.

The complaint that pepper ceilings, lower in this country than in England and elsewhere, are causing a shortage in that commodity, is nothing to sneeze at.—New York Sun.

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts five points. Then look for the correct answers below.

1. The pimpernel is which one of the following?
   Flower Bird Fish Animal.
2. Brass is an alloy of copper with which one of these?
   Aluminum Iron Silver Zinc.
3. Our largest city west of the Mississippi river is Denver Seattle Los Angeles St. Louis.
4. The age limit for railroad half fares is indicated by 4-10 5-12 6-13 7-11.
5. Which one of these types of straw is most edible for live stock?
   Oat Wheat Rye Barley.
6. Here is a problem that will give an advantage to housewives, for it involves the temperature of water used in washing various fabrics. You deserve one point for each correct judgment.

	Hot water.	Tepid water.
Cotton	———	———
Wool	———	———
Silk	———	———
Nylon	———	———
Linen	———	———

Score yourself as follows: 0-2, poor; 3-6, average; 7-8, superior; 9-10, very superior. [Note—The last question counts five points.]

[Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.: Copyright: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ANSWERS.

1. Flower. 2. Zinc. 3. Los Angeles. 4. 5-12 years. 5. Oats. 6. Cotton and linen may be washed in hot water. The other three require only lukewarm water.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office

MR. PEPYS IN HIS CORNER.

2d Sept.—Came to work last Monday facing a double-duty week, what with fixing up my next Linebook for the printers, and found an expeditionary force in my corner, preparing to open a new door thru the wall within an inch of my desk, thus making a roadway over my live body. Here is a pretty kettle of fish, I thought, for my desk was skewed over, pinning me against a filing cabinet. Contrived to work, however, by changing myself into a triangular shape and sitting with my feet in a wastebasket.

The digging of the hole thru the wall reminded me of Edmond Dantès tunneling under the dungeons in the Chateau d'If before he became the Count of Monte Cristo, and I feared it would take as long. But on the third day the job was done, and then the two separated portions of the book reviewing department began to troop back and forth thru the new portal in order to ask one another what was the latest word from dear old Red Lewis, the famous novel writer. They used to have to walk 50 steps to get this information, but now they can make it in two jumps and are in no danger of brain fag.

Found a Canadian nickel among my small change and dropped it into a slot machine when in need of a refreshing drink. The machine disgorged it with contempt, altho it was the right size. "Apparently the machine knows no allies," I said to its owner, and he answered, "That's nothing. It sometimes rejects New Deal nickels, too." The trick is done, I understand, with an electric eye that knows the difference between metal alloys. If I had such a machine to tell me what to put into the Linebook and what to throw out, I would not care how often the doorway builders invaded my premises.

PARIS LIBERATA.

That proud and lovely city on the Seine,
Queen city of the world for many an age,
The citadel of him called Charlemagne
And many another famed in history's page,
Now lifts her long-bowed head exultantly.
She knew amidst her shame and darkest fears
That streets where rang the cry of liberty
Would not oppression bear for many years.

The temple of Our Lady still is there;
The Arch of Triumph has survived its shame;
Along each boulevard and well known square
The gayety begins to seem the same.
But Paris freed from bondage grim and long
Must gird herself to make her country strong.

Cecil B. Williams.

Choppy Copy.

There are those who say a dog understands only a word at a time, and you must issue your "commands" in such words as "sit," "lie," "up," and "down."

'Tain't so! Choppy and I have real conversations, and he turns his head from one side to the other until I get to a sentence he understands. When I say, "Run, look out the window; company's coming," do you know what he does? He runs and looks out the window, and there better be company, too, or he sulks in the bathroom until he gets ready to come out.

If Choppy has been a bad boy, which is unusual, I tell him, "Go to the kitchen and sit there!" and he goes and sits in the kitchen, but he does not stay there long. If you watch closely you will see his nose come around the door, but Choppy knows his nose cannot see, so in a few moments you will see his eyes peeking around the door. Should he think we are not watching he will ooze around the door, walk behind my big chair, behind the piano bench, hug the wall, and end up in front of my feet.

Choppy will sit up on command, but his best trick is when I tell him to "Waltz me around again, Willie," when he rises on his hind feet and waltzes around. He does not know many tricks, but that is because he has been smart enough to get out of learning them.

Choppy does not talk, but I am supposed to know what he wants, and he has one way of asking—by sitting up and scratching at my hand. So I ask him in sentences: "Do you want to go 'outie'? Do you want supper? Do you want a bath?" I decide by his actions which one he wants.

Sometimes he barks in reply to my questions. Is it his fault if his master is so stupid he does not understand Choppy talk? Roy Engel.

The "Chicago Tribune" march was composed by W. Paris Chambers and was introduced in 1893 or thereabouts. Chambers was a very popular cornet soloist, one of the best of his time. He was featured with the Pullman band, directed by J. F. Hostrauser, at the Columbian exposition of 1893. He wrote many fine marches, of which the "Chicago Tribune" has always been considered the best. Fred C. Williams.

H. O. E. writes: "A soldier friend writes that he has been hospitalized for about seven months because of migrane headaches and that the government has canceled his insurance. He has been told that when a soldier is hospitalized for six months or more his insurance is canceled because he is considered a poor risk."

The national service life insurance remains in full force as long as the premiums are paid, either by the insured or by the beneficiary. If the insured allows his insurance to lapse for more than three months, it is necessary that he submit to another physical examination before reinstatement. If this soldier is still in the army hospital and has never canceled his original class N allotment for insurance, his insurance is still in force.

C. R. asks: "Can you tell me what C. R. stands for in a soldier's address?"

The Yank is in an infantry replacement control division.

A. S. asks: "Can a sister receive her brother's mustering out pay if he dies after leaving service and he has not been paid?"

No. Only a wife, child or children, or parents may receive it.

NEW REMEDY IN ALLERGY.

IN some cases of allergy among children, try as we may, we cannot discover the offender. Skin tests and the elimination diet, no matter how carefully conducted, may not reveal the culprit. Apparently there are many factors concerning this condition which we do not understand.

An excellent plan that the physician can adopt is to look for the presence of a special type of white cell [eosinophil] in the blood, the sputum, or the nasal discharges. If these particular forms are encountered, there is reason to believe that sensitivity exists. The number of such leucocytes will drop steadily with convalescence. In this way, we can tell whether or not the patient is getting better.

Marked amelioration may follow the restriction of sweets of all sorts, substituting thoroly cooked cereals. Instead of prohibiting beef fat, it has been found that this element may be added to the menus without danger. Meat is allowed in moderate amounts altho it may be limited if the child has been a heavy eater of this edible.

Now comes the report of C. L. Bartlett on a series of youngsters treated with a drug known as "ethylene disulfonate." In a group of 247 sufferers, 86 per cent were relieved from asthma, 79 per cent from hay fever, 100 per cent from eczema, and 92 per cent from hives. The victims varied in age from four months to 16 years.

One precaution will need to be exercised—namely, the omission of medicines such as sedatives [particularly barbiturates], opiates, alcohol, the sulfonamides, and quinine. If any one of these products has been prescribed, it should be stopped and several days allowed to elapse before the new compound is utilized. The full dose is given at each injection and the material is introduced into the muscles of the buttocks. Sometimes only one treatment will be called for.

The most striking improvement occurred in a case of eczema. An 8 year old lad had been afflicted since the third month of life. The skin had become involved over a large portion of the body. The first "shot" was administered in July, 1942. By March of 1943, he was wholly symptom free. Asthmatic signs yielded gradually. Eleven weeks after the plan was started, complete recovery ensued. No further difficulty has been noted.

According to Bartlett, the remedy is harmless inasmuch as no one of his subjects experienced an unfavorable reaction. This statement can be made only when it is understood that certain incompatible drugs will not be employed.

It seems reasonable to conclude that this substance is worthy of trial with those individuals who fail to respond to dietary control or specific vaccination. It may be of value particularly with those youngsters who show increasingly severe symptoms, such as wheezy breathing or persistent scaling of the cuticle.

MILK RETURNS.

Mrs. M. writes: We have a 4 month old baby who spits up food several times during the day. This happens two or three hours after feeding. She is doing well, has a good appetite, and is gaining. Is there any cause for concern?

REPLY.

Possibly a slight contraction of the stomach outlet. So long as she gains, there is no reason to worry. Help her to "burp" after each feeding, by holding her over your shoulder.

PAIN IN THE NECK.

L. K. writes: Whenever I am under a nervous strain the muscles in my neck stiffen and I can't relax them. Is there something that will help?

REPLY.

Heat and gentle massage are your best allies. Try hot packs or diathermy. Perhaps you can practice emotional control and avoid these episodes.

PROTECT EYES.

M. P. E. writes: Is it necessary to keep a child with measles in a dark room?

REPLY.

Not essential. On the other hand, because the eyes are bleary [irritated], they should be protected from strong light.

NOT AS A RULE.

A. T. writes: Is pain present in goiter?

REPLY.

Rarely. In unusual circumstances, however, pressure may be responsible for certain twinges and aches.

NOT EASILY.

T. E. writes: Can a person break himself of the drug habit?

REPLY.

Yes, with competent assistance. Institutional care is advised.

Red Head in the Sky.

This is the story of a red headed boy, a tall, gangling boy with a face always twisted in a wry grin, who joined the army air corps long before Pearl Harbor, and long before Pearl Harbor was out of it again.

He was a good flyer, but as gay in the air as on the ground, and once, while still an air cadet, came home on leave, rented a plane, and took his sister up for a ride. Soon they flew over a river.

"Ever play dragonfly?" he asked her.

She had never played dragonfly, so they did. They flew low over the muddy river, skimmed the water, darted up, then down, then off in long low swoops. They had everything but iridescence as they skipped about, and then they hit a low wire. After this they executed a complete involuntary somersault, and because the red headed boy was a good flyer they landed right side up on a sandbar in the middle of the river and took off again from the sandbar.

That gives you an idea of what he was like. He went back to his air base and was about to be graduated, second in a class of 800 or so, when he insisted on flying at an altitude only four feet above the head of his flight commander. That ended that, for he was washed out.

But he was a flyer, so he hitchhiked to Canada and joined the Royal Canadian air force. He looked as young as he was, 20, with that thatch of red hair over that funny twisted face, so he grew a mustache. It was a woeful affair, but it worked, and he tried to look serious more often and in time became a wing commander.

He began to change in other ways, too. He began to read poetry. He said all the air corps boys did. They read that and nothing else. They found a close alliance between high altitude, flying a ship which was to them the purest and most beautiful thing in the world, and the purity of poetry. It was a Keatsian thing, and when you stopped to consider it, proper.

But finally the United States entered the war, and he obtained a transfer to the American air corps. Here his misadventures, which had never ended, blossomed magnificently. His antics, and their invariably successful conclusion became legendary. The only thing that was right about him was his flying and that honest, grinning face under the thatch of red hair. Because of these in time he had his Flying Fortress to pilot and then, in time, his B-29, and when he took the latter overseas, he took only one book, a little paper anthology of verse. Two months later he wrote home and asked for another. The first one was worn to tatters.

Then, on the heels of that request, came that awful phrase: "Missing . . . over Manchuria."

The most cruel part of this war is the anguish and uncertainty of those "missing" reports. The most beautiful part of it is hope. All we're trying to pass on is what the boy's brother, also a flyer, said to their mother when he finally managed to reach her by telephone.

"Aw, Mother," he said, "Don't you worry, Old Jack'll be along. Why, he's gotten in more trouble than any man in the whole air corps, and he's always gotten out of it—easy."

No Historian, He.

After giving considerable thought to the matter this department has concluded that a knowledge of history is only an impediment to one who would go thru life prosperous and unscathed. This nugget of profundity is occasioned by the social call a Chicagoan, now a lieutenant in the navy, paid upon one of our higher elected officials when home on leave recently. The official was warmly pleased to see the pilgrim. "And where are you serving?" he asked. The lieutenant smiled brightly. "Under Commodore Perry on Lake Erie," he replied. The official nodded his head. "Yes, yes," he said solemnly. "That's fine. When you get back, give him my regards. I met him once."

THE POST-WAR WORLD.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Two great powers will emerge from this world conflict, Russia and the United States. England may be temporarily sustained by the United States, but not permanently for the expense of such a policy is intolerable to American self-interest.

Thus we may envisage the two great world states, one oriental, the other occidental, gazing at each other speculatively across two oceans. There should be no conflict of interest unless Moscow remains the source of destructive ideological propaganda or the United States becomes party to an agreement which in disguised substance underwrites preservation of England's European balance of power and the British empire.

We are in the final period of new alignments of great powers. England has entered the "Twilight of the Gods." Her days of glory as the leading world power are over. She will soon take her place with the decadent Italians, Spanish, French, and others and muse by the fireside of former greatness. The English have demonstrated their inability to defend their empire and by their own acts are helping to destroy their balance of power policy whereby they have ruled Europe for generations.

With Germany destroyed as a powerful military nation there remain no potential European allies that England can use to hold Russia in check. This explains desperate British efforts to form a world organization, really an English-American military alliance in disguise, to protect English interests. It also explains the money conferences, inteded for English benefit, the antebellum lend-lease requests, etc.

Russia will emerge from this war as a world state utterly different from any that history records and as novel as a new first magnitude star to the astronomer. There have been hundreds of dictatorships in history, that is, political dictatorships. Never before has there been a world state, the very essence of whose absolute totalitarianism was economic, with political despotism a mere sequel. This is something new under the sun. It is also startling that the same arguments supporting Russian economic dictatorship are those used by Communists in taking over the CIO, which in turn has captured the Democratic party. H. D. BENNETT.

SEN. BARKLEY'S FOURTH TERM REASONING.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Sen. Barkley has made his argument for a fourth term. It is interesting in that he is one of the contentious old fellows who had a major quarrel with the President. In spite of his veto of the theory of the indispensable man, he still feels that it is expedient to ask for four years more of Roosevelt.

One statement is amusing. He says, "Democracies cannot fight great wars with a sprawling, disconnected, heterogeneous organization." It seems to me we have been doing this. His description seems to fit our present complicated administration with its many crossings in jurisdictions and its overreaching of legal authorities. PERCY SAWYER.

TRANSPORTATION FOR SCHOOL TEAMS.

Sidell, Ill., Aug. 29.—A problem, now two years old, confronts every athletic department of the hundreds of high schools thruout the nation. The schools are asked to continue their athletic schedules as part of the physical training of thousands of boys who are being called to the colors. Those schedules require travel to the place of the game. Scores of schools have school buses which will accommodate from 36 to 60 persons. But the OPA has ruled that the buses cannot be used for transportation of athletic squads, using as a reason that the tire and gasoline situation prohibits such travel.

A football team with coaches, manager, and players numbers about 30 persons. All could be transported in one bus. The average round trip for the average high school interscholastic game is 40 miles. Instead of the bus, the trip requires at least eight automobiles. Eight cars will travel an aggregate of 320 miles. The one bus would travel only 40 miles. What kind of economy is this?

JOS. R. ATKINSON.

HE'S GLAD TO SERVE.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—I have just finished reading the letter of the "Chicago Private" in THE TRIBUNE today, and it makes me sick.

I have been in the army for 27 months, will be 38 in February, and I am still only a corporal [T/5]. I have some buddies in my outfit who have the same length of service and are still privates, and every one of us well educated, too, but we are only too glad to be doing our bit for Uncle Sam, wherever he needs us.

Perhaps if this poor fool will quit feeling sorry for himself he may still find enjoyment in serving his country wherever duty calls. In the meantime others of us in the service are not going to waste our time feeling sorry for him, and others of his patriotic fervor. CORPORAL.

RED ACTIVITIES OF REFUGEE UNIT ARE DISCLOSED

Failed on Promises to End Propaganda.

New York, Sept. 1 [Special].—The joint anti-Fascist refugee committee, which last week received official approval of the President's war relief control board, was disclosed by a survey today to have continued to operate as a Communist propaganda agency right up to the present time.

Results of the survey were made known as a spokesman for the President's board in Washington explained that the committee had convinced board members it had completely divorced itself from political and propaganda activities since last December when the board refused it certification.

Promised to Limit Field.

Presidential certification, now granted in a reversal of the board's own previous decision, requires the national war fund to consider the anti-Fascist committee for membership. It is considered doubtful, however, that the committee will qualify to share in the fund's forthcoming drive to raise $250,000,000.

Following the board's December rejection, Edward K. Barsky, chairman of the committee, promised that the organization's activities would at once be confined to refugee relief.

Instead, the survey disclosed, the committee continues to serve as a Communist sounding board, its activities are still almost exclusively reported and headlined in the Daily Worker and the committee even advertises in that official organ of the Communist party.

Advertised in Red Paper.

Since the last December promise that the committee would mend its ways, its record was shown by the survey to have included the following activities:

On July 1 it advertised in the Daily Worker that a "fiesta time" holiday gathering would be held at the Groton home of William Gropper, official Communist cartoonist. On July 23 the committee took a five column ad in the Daily Worker for a "fiesta republicana" at Harmony park, on Staten Island, for which tickets were on sale at the Communists' official workers' bookshop and other Communist centers.

Entering into the Spanish political situation, the committee announced in a July 12 press release that the "fiesta republicana" would be a ceremony at which spokesmen for the allied nations would officially adopt republican Spain into the fold of the fighting allies, even tho officially republican Spain is not yet included.

In July 6, Miss Helen Bryant, executive secretary of the committee, appeared officially as one of the main speakers at the sixth national convention of the International Workers Order, official fraternal affiliate of the Communists.

During existence of the Hitler-Stalin pact, chief backers of the committee were leaders in the Communists' drive against selective service, aid to Britain and preparations for defense.

THEATER OF AIR TO GIVE MOZART DRAMA TONIGHT

Weber's Son to Play in Final Program.

The Chicago Theater of the Air in its final concert of the season from the Grant park bandshell tonight will present "The Rebel of Salzburg," an all-Mozart program. Heinzl Weber, 11 year old pianist, and son of Henry Weber, director of music for W-G-N, will be heard with his father in a performance of the first movement of Mozart's Sonata in D Major for Two Pianos. Marion Claire, prima donna of the Theater of the Air operetta series, also will appear.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be heard by the radio audience during the first hour of the program which will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Another hour, not to be broadcast, will follow.

Vocal and Dramatic Casts.

Vocal soloists will be Reinhold Schmidt, Virginia Haskins, and Angelo Raffaelli. Mr. Weber will direct the orchestra and chorus.

Heinzl Weber will portray the piano role of Mozart as a boy. The dramatic cast will feature Robert Ellis as Mozart, the child; Eric Lord as Mozart, the boy, and Jack Petruzzi as Mozart, the man. Others in the dramatic cast will be Sidney Ellstrom, Cliff Soubier, John Barclay, and Norman Gottschalk.

POLICE AND FIRE UNIONISTS TO LET JOLIET BE BOSS

Representatives of Joliet police and firemen who recently joined a labor union gave a written pledge to Mayor Arthur O. Janke yesterday that the union will not attempt to interfere in the administrative affairs of the police and fire departments. Mayor Janke ordered the union members Thursday to present him with the pledge within 24 hours, on a threat of dismissing them from their jobs. Yesterday he asked the Joliet board of fire and police commissioners to overlook his earlier request to outlaw the Joliet local of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employes' union.

Personal Mail Exchange Resumed to Foggia, Italy

Personal correspondence between the United States and Foggia, Italy, a province of approximately 518,000 population, has been resumed, Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen said yesterday. No commercial, financial or business communications will be permitted and the mail is subject to censorship, he added.

Two Seized on Charges of Rape Are Identified

Le Roy Nels Moe, 16, of 1511 N. Washtenaw av., and Lester Engelbrecht, 20, of 1811 Winnebago av., who were seized as suspected rapists last night at Fairfield and North avs., later confessed, police said, to attacking two student nurses in Humboldt park on Aug. 22. Detective Norman Quam said one of the nurses identified Moe as the man who raped her, while the other nurse accused Engelbrecht of attempted rape.

"While you're laying by the peaches, Bud and I thought we'd lay by a supply of what it takes to go with 'em."

Lay by a good supply of Wheaties, America's favorite whole wheat flakes. Lay up lots of that important whole grain nourishment and delicious "second helping" flavor. Lay into a big bowlful of milk, fruit, and Wheaties, "Breakfast of Champions"—every morning.

Adzing (shaping and finishing) ties by machinery.

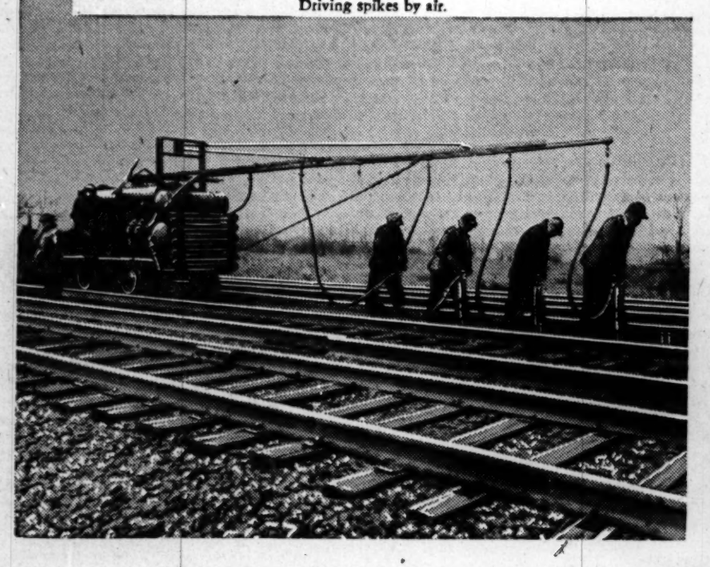
Keeping Tracks Fit For War's Load



Driving spikes by air.

Cleaning ballast by machinery.

It cost the Pennsylvania Railroad $108,488,084 last year to maintain tracks and structures and keep them fit for duty

This is one side of the railroad war effort you probably seldom think about—the gigantic job of keeping the roadway in shape.

With trains on the go day and night, carrying the heaviest freight and passenger loads in all history . . . rails, roadbeds and bridges take a terrific pounding—without any let-up, too.

To keep tracks in shape to carry this tremendous load costs a lot of money. Rails and crossties must be replaced, ballast cleaned for proper drainage, bridges and structures repaired. The amount spent by the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1943 for these purposes alone represented more than 11 cents of every dollar the railroad took in. That expenditure represented almost 10 per cent of the $1,100,000,000 total charges of all Class I railroads for costs incident to track maintenance in '43, the largest single year's expenditure for such purpose in railroad history.

Yet, that colossal sum does not include a single dollar of the huge cost of operating and repairing railroad equipment. On the Pennsylvania Railroad alone, about 46,000 men are employed in the repair shops, keeping equipment in service. Nor does it include any of the cost of the many other functions essential to complete transportation service.

Such figures indicate how much a railroad must do—and spend—to speed the war effort, to keep the war trains at work, to provide the service you need for that essential journey.

GOVERNORS OF 3 STATES JOIN IN PLEA FOR DEWEY

Schoeppel, Martin and Thye Speak.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Republican governors of Kansas, Pennsylvania and Minnesota tonight called the Democratic administration the tool of "pressure groups," accused Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Harry S. Truman of inconsistency and termed the New Deal "name-calling, hate-making, and backward-looking."

The statements were made in texts released in advance by the Republican national committee in New York.

The three governors were speakers on the second of a series of broadcast programs, which the Republican national committee is sponsoring as "a prelude to Gov. Dewey's opening campaign address at Philadelphia Sept. 7."

[In the first of the series, last Tuesday, addresses were made by Governors Green of Illinois, Warren of California, and Baldwin of Connecticut.]

Alien Doctrines Assailed.

Gov. Schoeppel of Kansas spoke tonight from Kansas City, Mo., Gov. Martin of Pennsylvania from Harrisburg, Pa., and Gov. Thye of Minnesota from Minneapolis.

Gov. Schoeppel, bringing the "pressure group" charge, said:

"At this particular time, we have a new pressure group which looks large on the New Deal political horizon and seems all powerful in its council. This group to which I refer is called the political action committee. It has as its head Sidney Hillman. It takes its doctrines direct from Earl Browder.

"This Earl Browder-Sidney Hillman political action committee is not democratic. It is made in the image of nothing that is American. It is an import, an item by item, chapter and verse import of the fatal political doctrines of Europe, which time and time again destroyed Europe's freedom and everything else worthwhile.

"They want a fourth term administration because they want a government in Washington that is indebted to them up to the ears. And they expect to collect on that debt."

Truman's New Viewpoint.

Gov. Martin asserted that since his nomination Sen. Truman had not repeated his statement that the war might be lost in Washington because of "red tape and burocratic waste" because when he made it "he was only a United States senator bent on winning the war," while now he is "a candidate hungry for votes."

"I wonder," Martin said, "what he would say, if votes were not his chief concern, about this week's tragic collapse of the war production board, the most important civilian agency for speeding victory."

Gov. Martin quoted Truman as having said "the reasons for this waste and confusion were everywhere the same, the lack of courageous, unified leadership and centralized direction at the top."

"Evidently," Gov. Martin said, "Mr. Truman knows his New Deal Washington. Evidently, also, he knows Mr. Sidney Hillman of the Browder-Hillman axis. He knew Mr. Hillman when he held a very important defense job.

Truman Views on Hillman.

"He had a chance to see whether Mr. Hillman was doing an American job for America and this is what he said about Mr. Hillman: 'If Sidney Hillman cannot or will not protect the interests of the United States, I am in favor of replacing him with some one who can and will.'

"That, my friends, is Truman on Hillman. And that is Truman on the incapacities, inadequacies, and weak leadership of the administration which the same Mr. Truman now proposes to fasten on us for another four years."

Gov. Thye quoted Dewey's statement—"America is young and does not know defeat"—and praised his political doctrine and "vision for the future of America."

"What a welcome relief it is," he said, "after the name-calling, hate-making, backward-looking talk of recent years."

Gov. Thye said Minnesota had had "bitter, first hand experience" to back up the statements of governors Schoeppel and Martin.

"We know," he said, "what happens when Communists and other disruptive elements reach into a government to pervert it—to divide the people, to stir up class hate, to destroy."

STERN REBUKE GIVEN NEW DEAL AND HILLMANISM

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—Democrats sat silent today while Sen. Moore [R., Okla.] delivered one of the sternest indictments of the Roosevelt administration that has ever been heard in the senate.

Sen. Moore.

Moore charged:

1. That the New Deal is permitting domination by Sidney Hillman, the CIO political action committee, Communists and others of alien philosophy to perpetuate itself in office thru the fourth term.

2. That Atty. Gen. Biddle has ignored congressional law by failing to prosecute Hillman and Hillman's PAC for the use of tremendous slush funds in behalf of the New Deal.

3. That the Roosevelt administration, "from the top down," is encouraging Hillman and his PAC in open violation of the law.

Consider Capitalism Evil.

4. That the administration, "from the palace guard down to the youngest burocrat," works on the theory that "the Constitution is outmoded and that capitalism and private enterprise are instrumentalities of evil."

The Democrats' failure to reply to Moore was ascribed by persons who heard the denunciation to two causes:

First—The New Dealers were already squirming because of the blind devotion pledged to President Roosevelt last night by Sen. Truman [D., Mo.] in Truman's acceptance of the Democratic nomination for Vice President at Lamar, Mo.

Democrats' Private Views.

New Dealers said privately that Truman's reference to his "commander in chief" and his pleas for returning to power the "experienced" leadership appeared to reflect a change of viewpoint since the senator a few months ago was charging administration agencies with inefficiency.

Second—Moore based much of his speech on indictments made against the New Deal by the Democrats themselves. Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.] offered no reply when Moore told of Barkley's denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt for vetoing the tax bill.

Other Democrats whose words Moore hurled back at the Democratic side were Sen. Bailey [N. C.], Sen. Maloney [Conn.], Sen. Johnson [Colo.], Sen. Chavez [N. M.], and Sen. McCarran [Nev.].

Moore read the senate a letter he has just written to Biddle regarding the latter's failure to prosecute the PAC for using a slush fund in behalf of the New Deal.

Reason for Reluctance.

Moore told of the federal laws regulating labor unions and slush funds and said:

"In view of the plain language of the federal laws and the open and admitted political activity of the CIO, there is a feeling in the public political mind that your office is reluctant to prosecute this group for law violations for the reason that its announced purpose is political activity and its announced purpose is to reelect President Roosevelt for a fourth term, and that you too are enthusiastically favoring the same objective."

After reading the letter, Moore charged Hillman's record is one of "lifelong association and collaboration with the Communists."

Finds Americans Stunned.

He said the Democrats themselves are chagrined by Hillman's domination of their convention at Chicago and thousands of Americans are stunned by the spectacle of a leadership that has arisen outside the party to control its actions as effectively as did the Pendergast, Kelly, Crump, and Flynn machines.

"I pause," Moore said, "to inquire of the members of the Democratic party what they can expect of the future by delivering control of their party into the hands of men who hold the ideologies represented by Hillman, Harry Bridges, Joseph Curran, Donald Henderson, Lee Pressman, Julius Emspak, Abram Flayer, Ferdinand C. Smith, and others of the CIO political action committee, all of whom the Dies committee has found to be members of or affiliated with the Communist party.

"Communism is wholly incompatible with our republican form of government. The assumption of political leadership by men who represent influence not in harmony with Americanism, thru the use of huge slush funds and the threat of wielding the power of mass votes at this critical time, when Americans are dying on the battle fronts around the world for the preservation of our republican form of government, is a tragedy undeserved by our soldiers.

"It is nothing short of fraud for public officials to pledge themselves to preserve and defend the Constitution and at the same time fail to repudiate the support of those who profess to believe in a communistic destruction and overthrow of that Constitution."

Moore charged the Roosevelt administration has encouraged strikes and sitdowns while America's fighting men are being killed in defense of the strikers.

Varied Events Fill Calendar for Week-End

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE Labor day week-end has plenty of attractions for the Chicagoans who patriotically are staying at home instead of overburdening the already crowded trains and buses. A flurry of debutante parties will keep the younger set busy, the only real activity on the debutante front this fall, while the usual country club events and the Oakbrook Horse show tomorrow will provide recreation for other and larger groups.

The debutantes will be on the move today from early afternoon until after midnight, for the hostesses for today's parties for the younger crowd—a luncheon, a debut tea, and a lawn fête — thoughtfully arranged their calendars so that the hours of the events do not overlap. Largest of the parties will be the tea which Mr. and Mrs. William Pratt Sidley and Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sidley are giving to introduce to society their granddaughter and daughter, Miss Elaine Sidley. It will be held from 4 to 7 p. m. at the William P. Sidleys' Winnetka home. The party will be out doors, with music on the lawn, weather permitting.

The debutante's four assistants are Miss Flossie Curtis, Miss Barbara Straw, Miss Rosalind Oates, and Miss Shirley McMillan, the last of Darian, Conn. The debutante and her parents just have arrived from their ranch at Encampment, Wyo. Following the tea Miss Curtis and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Curtis, will take the debutante, her assistants, and about 30 young friends to the Onwentsia club for dinner and dancing.

Other Debutante News.

The day's festivities will start with a luncheon which Mrs. John Eager Lloyd of Hubbard Woods is giving at the Indian Hill club to introduce her granddaughter, Miss Peggy Cox of New Orleans. The debutante, whose formal name is Marguerite, will receive with her mother, Mrs. Theodore F. Cox of New Orleans, and Mrs. Cox's sister, Mrs. William Ward Clore. Four young women have been asked to assist informally, the debutante's cousin, Miss Peggy Rich; Miss Curtis, Miss Ann Wilcox, and Miss Ann Gregory. Mrs. Cox will return to New Orleans next week, but her daughter will remain in Hubbard Woods for the early part of the winter. After the Christmas holidays, she and Mrs. Lloyd will go south.

Another gay party following this afternoon's tea is a dance Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kuehnle are giving at their Winnetka home for Miss Carla Hawley, debutante daughter of the Jess B. Hawleys of Geneva. Unless it rains, the young guests will dance on an outdoor platform strung with lanterns and refreshments will be served informally out doors. The feminine guests will consist of young women who are going to Pine Manor with Miss Hawley and North Shore Country Day school graduates who were classmates of the Kuehnles' daughter, Carolyn, who is entering Wheaton college in Massachusetts.

Week-End Events.

The trophy table for the Oakbrook horse show tomorrow at the Oakbrook Polo club in Hinsdale will be gleaming with 20 pieces of silver that have been contributed as prizes in various classes. A 36 inch sterling silver loving cup on an ebony base, which has been given by the club in the name of Lt. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, the American general who is a Japanese prisoner in Formosa, highlights the prizes. The show will open at 9:30 a. m. and continue all day, ending with a cocktail party for the exhibitors. Paul Butler is general chairman of the event.

The young friends of Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. George H. Schulz who patriotically are spending the week-end at home have a gay party on their calendars for this afternoon, a cocktail party which Mr. and Mrs. Otto C. Schulz are giving at their Evanston home. Comdr. and Mrs. Schulz will leave for Washington, D. C., toward the middle of the month.

The series of informal Sunday parties that Mr. and Mrs. O. Victor McGrew of Evanston have been giving at their summer home in Delavan Lake, Wis., will come to a climax tomorrow when about 35 of their neighbors gather for a gala barbecue supper, one of the last parties before the season is over.

Another house at Delavan that will be gay over the week-end is the summer home of Dr. and Mrs. Melford C. Zinser, who will have the Lester Essigs and Miss Herma Clark with them over the holiday. They will go to the Delavan club's party tonight, and later to the president's ball at the Big Foot Country club in Lake Geneva, Wis. Tomorrow Mrs. Zinser will give a small tea at home for Miss Clark, who will talk on her Tribune column, "When Chicago Was Young." The whole group will attend a performance of "Papa Is All" by the Belfry Players in Williams Bay tomorrow night, and Monday Miss Clark will give one of her "Bustles and Bangs" monologs at the Delavan club.

The Knollwood club is hoping for fair weather tonight for an outdoor style show, pool party, and supper-dance, starting at 8:30.

Wedding News.

When Miss Gloria Hope Matthews and Corp. Claude G. Metzler are married at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Howes Memorial chapel in Evanston, she will wear the rose-white satin wedding gown in which her sister, Mercedes, was married to Duncan E. Williams two years ago. Mrs. Williams will be her sister's only attendant. Corp. Metzler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claudius E. Metzler of Evanston, will have William Treacy as best man, and Corp. Philip Behling and Corp. Carl Erwin will usher. Later there will be a small reception in the Evanston home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Carey Matthews. After a short wedding trip Corp. Metzler and his bride will live in Highland Park near his post at Fort Sheridan.

Women in War Work

By Dorothy Johnson

A communication from allied headquarters in Algiers, North Africa, reports the arrival, after a high speed convoy trip from the United States, of a contingent of 25 WAC officers and 109 enlisted women, including six Chicagoans. The detachment brings to approximately 1,800 the number of WACs serving in the Mediterranean theater. Called to fill vacancies in signal companies, the women assumed duties following a brief indoctrination course.

Included in the contingent of women telephone operators, teletypists, radio operators, motor transport drivers, cooks, and clerical workers are the following Chicagoans: Technician 5th Class Dagmar Johnson, 5338 Magnet av.; Corp. Lila Michael, 6124 Ingleside av.; Sgt. Anna W. Popielak, 13301 Burley av.; Pvt. Mildred Reeks, 5932 Green st.; Pvt. Alice A. Rericha, 7927 Yale av., and Corp. Frances C. Rhode, 6319 Kenwood av.

Three other Illinois women in the detachment are Pvt. Aurelia F. Walker, New Berlin, who at one time studied at Moody Bible institute in Chicago; Technician 4th Class Nancy S. Grant, 200 Lawton rd., Riverside, and Pvt. Mary McReynolds, Bethany.

One of the WACs in the long distance room of a WAC staffed telephone exchange in the same theater is Technician 4th Class Genevieve V. Wade, whose Chicago home is at 2810 E. 81st st. She was a telephone operator here before her enlistment.

American women have replaced scores of soldiers on the switchboards thruout the theater. Most of the operators on army boards had telephone experience as civilians and find that there is little difference between running a board in North Africa and putting thru calls in Chicago. Speed, courtesy, and perseverance still are the principal requirements of an efficient operator.

Still another Chicago woman, Pvt. Margaret Nowicki, whose home is at 3249 W. Cullom av., is on the staff of the WAC Bugle Call, a weekly "official if unofficial" newspaper published by the WAC company stationed in a North African city.

The paper carries the head of Pallas Athene, insigne of the WAC. The four page, mimeographed sheet follows a three column layout, with the "story of the week" getting a double column on page one. Usually the featured story reviews an important event of the preceding week, such as an anniversary party commemorating the activation of the company or a date in the history of the contingent. Wedding news always rates a page one spot, as do changes in enlisted or officer personnel.

The publication keeps WACs informed about events on the calendar, telling them when movies may be seen and notifying them about glee club recitals, the athletics schedule, church services, and special entertainments.

Choruses Sing Trivial Music in Grant Park

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

Some one had a good idea in bringing together 16 of the city's choral organizations, totaling more than 700 singers, for a grandiose climax to the summer's activities at the Grant park band shell last night. But unhappily, the climax proved to be a numerical rather than a musical one.

Had the project enjoyed even moderately intelligent musical guidance, something of true impressiveness might have been achieved with these vast resources. But, as it was, a pall of hopeless amateurishness hung over the proceedings. It was a case of all dressed up and no place to go.

The choruses were, one and all, enthusiastic and some of them, as amateur groups go, were not bad. But with that distressing underestimation of the city's musical taste now so widely prevalent in certain circles — and over which some of us hang our heads in shame—some one had decided that this must be a "popular" program, with the result that every number was of the most dismal triviality. Instead of at least a leavening of the great heritage of choral music —Lassus, Palestrina, Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn — the public was served, and we quote in order Balough, Friml, Cooke, Fearis, Mueller, Manna-Zucca, Kresmer, Cowen, Parks, Herbert, and Jones. There is the germ of a good thing in this idea of an annual massed chorus concert—but this wasn't it.

Naomi Cook provided the evening's most professional moment and even she was forced to restrict her brilliant soprano to such business as a "Dream Song" by Warford and the "Song of Love" from "Blossom Time."

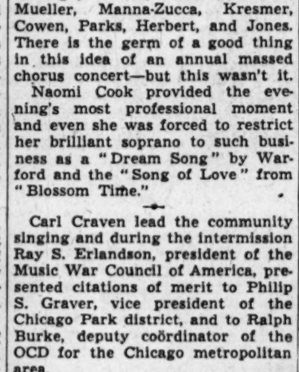
Kalamazoo College Club Plans Tea for Freshmen

The Chicago club of the Kalamazoo College Alumni association has invitations out to a pre-registration tea at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Cordon for Chicago area girls who plan to enroll at the college this year. Miss Helen Kettner of Chicago, pianist, and Miss June Alyce Wilmsen, dramatic reader, will share the program, arranged under the direction of Miss Marjorie Sundstrom of Chicago.



Thru the Looking Glass

In the east one of the larger beauty salons has established a "Make Over Course" for service wives.

It's a good idea, for psychological as well as other reasons. It's quite understandable, and there is certainly no criticism implied in our saying so, that lots of wives of men overseas have let depression get the best of them. But it is unfortunate and the woman who can snap herself out of it is in luck.

Loneliness and fear for the safety of a husband aren't easy to meet with courage when absence extends from weeks into months and from months into years. It's much easier to slip into self pity, and some bitterness, and then to lapse into disinterest about one's appearance and obligations. But it's a tendency that should be fought, for your own good as well as that of the man who has high hopes of coming back to an ideal and pretty wife.

Most women carrying on alone are doing a darned good job; they busy themselves. But there are some who're letting down. They weep a good deal, and complain even more, and they don't see any point in dressing up or keeping up. They feel martyred and, in a sense, take to sackcloth and ashes. Their loneliness can only increase, because even the most sympathetic and understanding of their friends find them, eventually, much too trying to bother with. If they gritted their teeth, kept gay, dressed brightly, and above all kept their outside interests—even increased them—they would be happier.

We know very well this is easier said than done. But many valiant women are doing it—and their bread of sacrifice and extra effort will come back cake. She who weeps and whines will weep and whine alone. ELEANOR NANGLE.

Eastern Girl Is Engaged to Capt. Aubrey

The announcement that Judge and Mrs. Sidney St. Felix Thaxter of Portland, Me., are making of the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis, to Capt. James D. Aubrey Jr. of the army air forces, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey of Highland Park, will come as a surprise to all the young pilot's friends here. Miss Thaxter, whose father is a judge of the Supreme court of Maine, will come to Highland Park for a visit in October. She is a graduate of St. Genevieve's school in Montreal.

Capt. Aubrey, who is stationed in Alaska, is a graduate of the Lake Forest academy, Phillips-Exeter academy, and Princeton university. He has three younger brothers, all in the army, Lieutenants Steber and George Aubrey and Pvt. David Aubrey.

Also of interest is the announcement that Mr. and Mrs. Donald D. Barnes of Milwaukee have made of the engagement of their daughter, Betty, to Capt. Frank Libuse Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Libuse of Chicago. Capt. Libuse has returned to the United States after two years of flying a transport plane in the South Pacific, and after a short leave he will tour airplane factories with his plane, Old Miscellaneous, which is the oldest one in the far eastern air force, having flown more than 2,000 missions since its first flight in February, 1942. Capt. Libuse has been awarded the distinguished flying cross with three oak leaf clusters, the air medal with two clusters, and a Presidential citation with one cluster.

Miss Barnes attended Milwaukee-Downer college and Denison university, at which she was May queen in her senior year. She has been serving as a staff assistant at the Red Cross headquarters in Milwaukee. Capt. Libuse attended the University of Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert D. Rodosy of E. 78th st. announce the engagement of their daughter, Charlotte, to Pvt. Murrel Mathes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mathes of Drexel av. Pvt. Mathes recently returned from 42 months of duty in Alaska.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Polster of N. Hoyne av. announce the engagement of their daughter, Anne, to Bernard Schoen of Cleveland, O. The wedding is planned for Dec. 30.

Race Prejudice Hit in Talk at School of Catholic Action

Rash judgment without knowledge of facts was the definition of race prejudice made yesterday by the Rev. Gerald O. MacDonald of the Institute of Social Order addressing the Summer school of Catholic action at the Morrison hotel.

"Race prejudice consists in passing judgments of essential inferiority on all members of an ethnic group, and it arises either from self deceit or ignorance," he said. "We claim to be free men, but prejudice is an abdication of the freedom to think or act honestly."

Father MacDonald stressed the value of the 13 million Negroes to the social economy of the United States, because both as producers and consumers they enter into the manifold problems of industrial relations, agriculture, and domestic service.

Nuns representing 65 orders which have members attending the summer school appeared in a "style show" for the delegates. Most of the garbs remain unchanged in style since the 13th century.

Local Opera Auditions Give Contracts to 2

Two Chicagoland singers, one a man and the other a woman, yesterday won contracts with the Chicago Opera company in auditions held to select local artists for the company's 1944 season.

The winners were Mrs. Ola Moser, contralto, of 516 Cumberland av., Park Ridge, and Algerd Brazis, baritone, 1413 S. 49th av., Cicero. Their selection was lauded by the opera company's general artistic director, Fausto Cleva.

"In this first part of our season's auditions, I thought these people were best, so I engaged them to sing minor roles," Mr. Cleva said. "I am trying to have as many local singers as possible with the company this year. If this beginning is so lucky, I have no doubt that my plan will be successful."

Mrs. Ola Moser and Algerd Brazis. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Moser, 30, is the wife of a civilian employe of the army air forces procurement section in Chicago. They have two children, Jeanne, 14, and Larry, 3.

Next to winning the Chicago opera audition, Mrs. Moser cites her tour of Europe with the Westminster choir, shortly after she finished school in Dayton, O., as the most exciting thing that has happened to her.

To Mr. Brazis, his new contract is the most important thing in his life—with the exception of his wife and their 2 year old daughter, Beverly Ann. The 27 year old winner started taking violin lessons when he was 6 at the insistence of his mother. He would have preferred being with his playmates, he said. Later on he attended Morton Junior college, De Paul university, and Kent Law school with intentions of becoming an attorney. He left his studies two years before he received a degree in order to return to music.

"This is the greatest chance of my life," he declared.

G. O. P. Clubwomen Call for Equality in Political Organization

They elected Mrs. T. K. Rinaker of Carlinville president, succeeding Mrs. J. W. Hunt of Oswego. Others named were Mrs. Richard Yates Rowe, Jacksonville, first vice president; Mrs. John Thomas, Belleville, second vice president; Mrs. S. J. Fountain, Chicago, third vice president; Mrs. John M. Thomson, Chicago, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. R. Tallman, Shelbyville, treasurer, and Mrs. Fred Six, Pekin, recording secretary.

White Collar GIRL

WCG Week-End Highlight.

The lovely "night before the day we don't have to go to work." No bobby pins in the hair, no laying out of clothes for the next day, not even a bath. We scrub the make-up off, brush our teeth, tumble into bed, and off to sleep. Ah bliss, ah joy!

Hang On and Carry On!

Because I was told that exercise will make me look better, feel better, eat better, sleep better, and work better, I have taken to horseback riding. After three weeks of snapping my head off trying to post a trot, I can testify that the whole thing is a ghoulish joke.

It is very easy to get the horse. For $1.50 a man named Ivan gives me my choice of 78 horses, some of which look like one-hump camels and all of which feel like one-hump camels. Having paid dearly for what I know will be a painful hour, I stride boldly into the ring humming the opening bars of "La Traviata" and approach the horse. This serves to convince both the horse and me I'm not scared.

Mounting not only requires supreme courage but extraordinary agility. The process may be likened to standing with one foot on top of Tribune Tower and the other in the middle of Michigan av. Once I am settled uncomfortably in the saddle I always feel happier.

Sometimes when my steed breaks reluctantly into a stumbling trot I forget myself and scream, "Away-y-y Silver!" In spite of the instructor's withering comments, this exquisite moment makes up for a lot.

At the end of the hour I dismount, slightly bent, and ponder the benefits supposed to have been gained. My friends were hopeful that the experience would whittle my figger and improve my morale. So far, the only thing that has changed is my posture, and I'm seriously thinking of chucking my White Collar job and joining the crop corps so I won't have to kill myself exercising when the work day is done.

SKILLY.

We're Strictly Neutral.

I'd like to reply to Smokey and all the girls who are "positively writhing" because they never get service except when they enter a restaurant with their good-looking service husband. The waitress isn't interested in your boy friends or husbands—most of us have our own, complete with good looks and ribbons. What interests us is the 20 or 25 cents he puts under the plate as he leaves. That is what we appreciate. When some of you lassies come in, you demand a lot of service and never think of leaving a tip. That is the reason the men get a smile plus good service. I'd suggest you go to a serve-yourself place for a couple of weeks. I'm sure you'll be back and figure it's worth 10 cents. A WAITRESS.

INSTALMENT XXX.

AT BROCHARD'S.

Whoever it was, the person behind Carol was already halfway down the corridor, but the sound was not repeated. Carol slid back from the door and stood against the wall behind it, flattening herself out so completely that she could feel the maps pressing into her back. The unseen person was close now; so close she could have reached out and touched him. If he turned toward the stairway he must inevitably discover her in another instant. But the instant passed harmlessly. The front door opened and a shadow passed out into the unlighted street.

For several moments Carol stood screened by the door which opened inward. And then presently she found strength to leave the building and begin a slow journey down the crooked medieval street.

Without street lamps and with scarcely a glimmer showing from behind the shuttered windows it was hard to see her way, but Carol walked with more confidence now. The ruined house had been only a short distance from Brochard's. It soon became apparent that she had taken the wrong turn and, instead of reaching Papa Brochard's in a few short minutes, had plunged into a part of the old city which she did not know at all.

Every corner beckoned in a familiar fashion only to prove deceptive when she rounded it. Finally she sat down on a doorstep, the precious papers a burden now about her body, which was heavy with fatigue.

She forced herself to her feet and began moving again, this time without any attempt at gauging direction, thinking at worst she might be able to find the river. And then presently, as if conjured up out of her wishes, there was Papa Brochard's, right ahead of her.

Far from being tightly closed for the night as Carol had anticipated, Brochard's was wide open. The door stood ajar, the shutters had not been drawn, and far back in the kitchen a feeble light flickered. But there was an ominous silence about the building and the moment she stepped inside Carol saw why.

The place was a total wreck. Everything in sight had been wantonly smashed to bits.

Making her way thru the old porter's room she entered the big kitchen. One fragment of candle stuck in a bottle neck illuminated the wreckage—the broken dishes, the pots and kettles overturned on the vast range, the shattered tables and chairs. And in the midst of this havoc sat the dwarf, singing a tuneless, wordless song.

At sight of her, Georges-le-Chien came running to her like the dog for which he had been named. He ran around her in circles, pawing at her skirt, his gnome's face split in a broad grin, making sounds of welcome.

"Mme. Victorine—where is she?" Carol demanded. "And Papa? Is Brochard all right? Where are they gone? Try and tell me, Georges-le-Chien! Please try and tell me!"

But the dwarf could only make meaningless gestures. Evidently he had been alone so long that he was overwhelmed with pleasure at the arrival of some one he knew. Then with the suddenness of an animal pointing alarm he stopped abruptly to listen to something she did not hear as yet. Presently there was a slight noise in the passage outside. The dwarf pointed to the door which led to what had once been the wine cellar, and Carol opened it and stepped cautiously into the darkness.

The door closed behind her and she waited with her ear close to the heavy wood, but only muffled sounds came thru. Georges-le-Chien had evidently gone to meet the intruder. Then, just as she was beginning to wonder if he, too, had been carried off, she heard him returning. His scampering step sounded gaily on the bare tiles of the floor. Then he came to the door behind which she was hidden and knocked upon it.

"Whoever or whatever it was," Carol thought, "it's gone now or he wouldn't do that!"

She opened the door. There in the candlelight stood Bright Stoner, his tense face relaxing at the sight of her.

"Well, Kansas, you sure led me one merry chase!" he said.

Carol looked at Bright with shining eyes.

"I sort of figured you'd come here," she said huskily.

"I am now."

"Sit down," he said. "You're shaking. You still got the maps all safe?"

She nodded.

"Who wouldn't shake? I thought I'd lost you and I was worried sick about what to do with them." She obeyed him, tho, and he sat beside her, still holding her hand. "Do you know what has happened?" she asked. He nodded.

"It was all over town in no time at all," he told her. "I was at Andre's, that's Papagol's cousin, the fellow with the boat. I'd sent his kid, Raoul, over to the circus with a note telling you to come to Andre's place when the show was over and I was waiting there for you."

"I never got the note."

"The kid must have given it to Lita. He said he'd given it to the lady in the wagon. But he didn't come right back the way he'd been told to. Hung around the circus like any other young one would and crawled in under the canvas."

"Then he saw what happened?"

"Yes. He saw the whole shooting match and beat it back like a scared jackrabbit. Naturally, I went looking for you, but the circus had folded." She told him briefly of how she had gotten away.

"Was that you in the alley behind the old house?" she asked.

"Reckon so!" he said. "I imagined that you'd probably take that same trail if you'd escaped. And that you'd come here. Looks as if they'd blitzed poor Brochard, all right."

"Bright, did you see any sign of Lita at all?"

"No. Just the wagon, all shot to pieces. Kansas, I'm afraid it's bad news."

"You mean that she's been arrested?"

Bendix Plays Dramatic Role in 'Hairy Ape'

"THE HAIRY APE."

A United Artists picture, directed by Alfred Santell, starring William Bendix and Susan Hayward, and presented at the Roosevelt.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

NOTICE to LITTLE BOYS buying TICKETS:

"The Hairy Ape" is NOT an animal picture! [Strictly speaking.]

This edition of the old play by the analytical Eugene ["Strange Interlude"] O'Neill, which starred the late Louis Wolheim, dealt with implacable class hatreds, and had a gruesome ending, has been brought up to date with a war angle, accorded a happy finale, and tells the tale of a stoker and a siren.

The former learns the old "Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady" truth and the latter gets what is probably her first memorable come-uppance from the mass of beef, brawn—and, yes, I insist, brain!—that she had once called "A hairy ape"—a give and take which, quite likely, proves a long stride in the evolutionary process of both.

To appreciate properly the significance of this educational duet—"duet" seems hardly the word—you must see the picture from the start, taking special note of an episode in a Lisbon waterfront cafe. Here the stoker, on brief leave from his ship which is soon to embark for New York, hurls a coin at a waitress of, apparently, easy virtue, who, jiggling it down into her bodice, favors Stoker Hank with a LOOK. It's the same brand of LOOK he receives in a swank New York apartment some weeks later from the spoiled and wealthy Mildred, and which provides the mental eyewash that clears away a bloody haze that's sent him stumbling and bewildered into strange places. Seeing straight, buoyant master of himself, Hank goes back to his stokehole and "Her," the old freighter which he knows now for a certainty is better than any dame.

So you thought William Bendix was just "low comedy?" Let me tell you something different. He's one of the finest dramatic actors of the day. Two episodes I will never forget. One, dealing brutally—and pitifully—with ignorance and force, takes place in a Manhattan jail cell. The other occurs in Mildred's apartment and presents a lovely, lovely sight to those who by that time have learned to hate her with a lively hate—which I think makes it unanimous.

Miss Hayward's detestable Mildred is as cleverly interpreted as Bette Davis' heroine in "Of Human Bondage." That's praise! John Loder and Dorothy Comingore are effective. Notable in "bit" characterizations are Alan Napier as MacDonald and Roman Bohnen and Tom Fadden as Hank's stoker pals.

Action occurs in Lisbon, aboard ship, and in New York.

Take it away!

See you tomorrow.

'Food in International Relations' to Be Topic at Institute Meeting

The 20th Harris Foundation institute meeting, scheduled Monday thru Friday at Mandel hall, University of Chicago campus, will include on its program four free public lectures on the theme, "Food in International Relations."

C. A. Elvehjem, professor of biochemistry at the University of Wisconsin, will discuss "Advances in Nutritional Research and Welfare" at 4:30 p. m. Monday. At the same hour Tuesday, Karl Brandt, director of the Food Research institute of Stanford university, will speak on, "Marriage of Nutrition and Agriculture," and at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, Percy Bidwell of the Council of Foreign Relations, New York, will speak on "Post-war Trade Policies." In the final lecture, at 4:30 p. m. Thursday, Paul H. Appleby, assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget, will speak on, "New Horizons for Food and Agriculture."

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 1.—Walter Pidgeon's next for Metro will be "The Church of the Good Shepherd." Walter plays a priest, thereby following in the footsteps of Spencer Tracy, Bing Crosby, et al. John Considine will produce. It's the story of New York's Dannemora prison, and a great acting role for Pidge. . . . Paramount bought an original story for Betty Hutton titled "Too Good to Be True." It's by Harry Tugend. He'll do the screenplay and produce. Betty will do it after her stint in "Duffy's Tavern." When she'll get overseas is anybody's guess. . . . Harry Sherman has had so much pressure put on him by fans and exhibitors he'll probably continue the "Hopalong Cassidys" with a newcomer in Bill Boyd's part. . . . Charles Laughton, while reading the Bible for Decca, was told that his garden was sliding down the canyon, and for a moment forgot about the Bible. . . . Don't be surprised if Annie Sheridan dons a blonde wig and makes a quick test for "Life of Marilynn Miller" when she returns from the South Pacific. Of course, that epic would follow "When Old New York Was Young."

Now It's Up to Rationing Board.

If the gas rationing board sees the light, Sonja Henie's going to play hostess to about 90 soldiers who are now stationed at the Santa Barbara Biltmore hotel. She'll give an exhibition on ice, a luncheon, and do scenes from the picture, and Mrs. Billy Goetz is lining up stars from the VACS to act as hostesses. But so far, they haven't got gas to bring the boys down here. . . . Kim Hunter has been suspended because she's going to have a baby. She was very good in "When Strangers Marry," her first important picture. Most of our producers are very nice about motherhood and pay girls' salaries right straight thru. That's what Sam Goldwyn did for Teresa Wright. . . . The romance of Kitty Carlisle and her agent, Arthur Lyons, is all washed up.

There'll Be Big Change for Edgar.

Edgar Bergen advertises there's a woman in his life. In the ad he mentions Effie Klinker. In real life, she's Frances Westerman, model. She becomes Mrs. Bergen end of September or first of October. Frances evidently has her own ideas of a home, because Bergen's hilltop home is for sale and all his furniture. Yes, sir, he's going to make a clean sweep. . . . Franchot Tone and wife have left for New York and Niagara Falls to meet Tone's brother, Jerry, and settle their father's estate. When Tone returns, Universal gets him. . . . Alexander Knox and Geraldine Fitzgerald off to "Wilson" opening in Washington and Atlanta, and to hospitals. Knox is to be guest on "Information, Please" Sept. 11 with Wendell Willkie. There's a fearless young man. With one picture under his belt, he's not afraid to answer back; yet we have plenty of top stars who wouldn't go on that show for all the tea in China. . . . Darryl Zanuck's smart letting Greer Garson and Metro build up Gregory Peck. Then, too, Gregory's next picture with Ernst Lubitsch, "Dragonwyck," won't be ready until 1945.

The Great and Pseudo-Great.

Fred Allen had his whole gang with him on "Command Performance." Guest star was Paul Lukas. Paul came in complaining about script to man who had written it. Then the academy award winner ended up by asking Allen how to read his lines. Thruout the whole thing, Fred kept calling him "Luke." . . . Next "Command" is a request from marines on Island X. It's "Glad to See You"—one of Phil Silvers' lines in "Cover Girl." Seemed to do something to the natives, so marines requested a show around it with Phil, Betty Grable, Kathryn Grayson, Beatrice Kay, Helen Traubel, Connie Moore, and Maxine Sullivan.

Short Shorts.

Metro has signed another Pasadena community theater graduate—Paul Langton, who'll play the juvenile lead in "Hold High the Torch." . . . Leo Carrillo and his Palomino are off for rodeo in San Francisco. . . . Bill Dozier, at R. K. O., is so lucky in getting James Francis Crowe as his assistant. . . . Joe Bigelow, writer, was relaxed at his wedding to Jean Bartholomew. Joe wore his old brown suit and shoes, while she was done up in black spangles.

Add Diet Aids: Alfalfa and Grass Cookies

You now can buy stamina and energy by the box or in a bottle; at least the displays at the National Dietary Foods association convention in the La Salle hotel say you can.

Grass cookies, mint flavored alfalfa, a box of meatless hamburgers, and yeast with delicious hickory smoked bacon flavor added are all packaged and ready to sell to those who need a supplement to their diet. All these are in addition to herb teas of various kinds and shark liver oil, which, since it comes from a bigger fish, is supposedly more potent than cod liver oil.

The grass cookies, made from California grass, are as green as a shamrock, and rich in iron, minerals, and vitamins. They are advertised as honey sweetened, wheatless, and sugarless. Goat's milk is added for an extra kick.

Ninety-nine meatless hamburgers are contained in a small package which, the label on the box tells you, include lentils, oatmeal, corn meal, soy beans, sage, thyme, and curry.

Among the confections displayed are several varieties of so-called candy, recommended for aviators, explorers, and travelers. The candy, made from goat's milk whey, celery, alfalfa, tomatoes and such, is packed full of energy. There are only 97 calories in an ounce of a saccharin sweetened chocolate assortment and five calories in the special cookies. According to the printed matter the candy looks, smells, and tastes similar to the calory packed kind.

A special beverage, made from barley, figs, and bran is supposed to lull you to sleep and add "joy to your living," because the stimulating drug has been eliminated.

This was the seventh annual convention of the association and according to the retiring president, Edward Schauer, of Canton, O., the largest ever held. In addition to the biggest attendance he reported the greatest increase in membership ever noted. The convention will meet in Chicago again next year, he said.

New officers include Judson Ryon, president, Wilmington, Del., and J. Samuely, Burbank, Cal., member of the executive committee.

Catholic U. S. O. Marks 3d Birthday Tomorrow

The U. S. O. club at 1122 S. Wabash av., operated by the National Catholic Community service, a member agency of the United Service Organizations, will be three years old tomorrow. The center was opened four months before Pearl Harbor to extend hospitality to men in uniform.

Stage Notes

Michael Todd has signed Jeanette MacDonald for two seasons to appear in his production of an untitled operetta which he claims has a Victor Herbert score not yet heard in public. Miss MacDonald, who will sing in "Romeo and Juliet" and "Faust" during the Chicago Opera season, has not appeared on the stage since "Boom, Boom," in 1929. . . . "Rhapsody," the new operetta with a score by Fritz Kreisler, is destined for October opening at New York's Century theater. . . . Militza Korjus, the Bosnian soprano said to sing G sharp above high C, makes her Carnegie hall, New York, début Oct. 22. She also sings over the Columbia network Oct. 4, 11, and 18.

Child's Dress

The diagram shows how easy this child's dress is to cut. The clever little fashion uses a minimum of material and the simplest of trimming. Style No. 2525 is designed for sizes 6 months and 1, 2, and 3 years. Size 2 requires 1½ yards of 35 inch fabric, with 1 yard of ruffling. Style No. 3622 makes a rag doll 13½ inches tall with her clothes. For yardage requirements, consult pattern envelope. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

Order Clotilde patterns from Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY. Print name and address; state size. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

Give Prompt Care to Child's Sight Trouble

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

It is surprising to discover how often poor school grades can be traced to defective eyesight.

Do you know much about eyesight in children? How their eyes function in early life? We recently outlined briefly how vision works in the young baby and little child. Let me quote further today from the talk on the subject given under the auspices of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, covering the child whose vision is not normal:

"Some children are irritated by even short periods of close work, either because of farsightedness or because of the common eye condition known as astigmatism. This irritation is often reflected in behavior and in school work. Little mannerisms develop, the child rubs his eyes, frowns, tries to brush away a blur. His attention wanders and he rests his eyes by looking out the window or around the room. He does not like studies that require close and clear sight. Such children should have a thoro eye examination. Proper glasses will often correct the difficulty.

"Altho most children are farsighted, a few are nearsighted. Their sight is good for nearby objects but they cannot see in the distance. These children are often good students. They like close work and dislike activities requiring distant sight, so they are seldom good athletes.

"Nearsightedness is sometimes a serious and progressive eye condition, and when it occurs in children should always have prompt attention. Glasses will often offset the difficulty, but if the condition has progressed far, special educational facilities are necessary, to enable the child to secure an education with the least possible eye work. Such children also need every possible care to keep up their general health.

"Remember that illness weakens the eyes as well as the rest of the body. Communicable diseases in childhood are responsible for many eye diseases. When a child is convalescing from illness, find things to do, and games for him to play which will not require close eye work.

"Lastly, give prompt attention to any sign of eye difficulty. Remember that eyes are delicate organs, and sight is too precious a gift to abuse."

Therefore, if school isn't going too well for your son or daughter, don't dismiss it lightly or blame him for poor grades unless you have carefully checked all possible reasons for the decline in marks or lack of interest in school work as a whole.

Kitchen Pointers . . . . . By Mary Meade

"Some fruits I canned last year have a rubbery taste. I used glass lids with rubber rings. Is there any way to remove this objectionable flavor and what can I do to prevent its occurrence in future canning?"

If the fruit is allowed to stand in an open bowl for a day or two [in the refrigerator, of course], the rubbery taste usually will disappear. The rubber rings made this year have an odor not transferable to food. If you have any of last year's rings, air them well before using or discard them if you're doubtful.

"You seem to disapprove of open kettle canning. What are your reasons? The method seems to me so simple and satisfactory."

Open kettle canning of fruits and tomatoes is a gamble. Bacteria can get into jars so easily when food is transferred from kettle to jar, and spoilage is the result. Many reports of food spoilage come to us, and in the majority of cases we find the open kettle method was used. Besides being unsafe, the method is one which results in great vitamin loss and some loss of flavor. The product also is inclined to be soft and mushy. The water bath canner is the only method approved by canning authorities.

"Are there some interesting ways to flavor pears when canning them? I find them rather too bland."

Pears combine well with other flavors. To make orange pears, use juice and rind of half an orange for each quart of sirup. Remove rind before packing pears. For cinnamon pears, use some stick cinnamon and a few drops of red coloring. To make ginger pears, use ginger tea [ginger root boiled in water] in place of water in making sirup. Pineapple juice instead of water makes a delicious canned pear. The addition of lemon juice or a lemon slice sharpens the flavor.

Old Rain Coat Is Replaced by a Gay Garment

BY REA SEEGER.

Copy the buying tricks of the college girls and select your winter and fall raincoats while the collections are bright, varied, and complete. First in the fashion spotlight are the super-specials, the raincoats of a special process satin fabric that shines no matter how dreary the day. A new shade, snuff-brown, is going strong because it looks so neat and swanky, anything but the usual rainy day outfit of casual choice. A jaunty short cape, cinched in tie belt, snug fitted collar line, and wrists to the sleeves, and an ample wrapover section in front are details that click instantly. Or you may spend your money for a rainy day for a sleek beauty of satin in black, white, or colors.

If you demand precision, almost masculine, tailoring see the very swank coats of rain repellent gabardine, cut and detailed like your big brother's. The seamed precision is perfect in long covering lines in the set of the turnover collar, the opened seam in the center back, and the easy-to-slide-into silhouette. But the color range is restricted to that always good neutral, beige.

Glamor in the rain is easily acquired. See the exciting new two color raincoats, one-half the top of the blouse in red, the other in black. The skirt is black and the sleeves dark, but that splash of red certainly promises much for the dull day. Umbrellas to raise triumphantly during a shower are the very last word in giddy colors.

G. O. P. NATIONAL SURVEY SHOWS DEWEY WILL WIN

Party to Capture House, Brownell Assured.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Election of the Dewey-Bricker ticket and of a Republican house of representatives was predicted yesterday by National Chairman Herbert Brownell Jr. after a six hour session of the G. O. P.'s national executive committee, whose members reported to him on the most extensive surveys to date.

Republican control of the senate depends upon a continuation of the trend as it has been going since the convention, Brownell said.

It was the first meeting of the executive committee, representing all parts of the country, since the convention. There were only two absentees among the 24 regular and ex-officio members. The meeting was held in the Blackstone hotel.

Regions were assigned to members, who took into account many community polls as well as the opinions of hundreds of political veterans.

Only 4 Per Cent Shift Needed.

"It was the most careful analysis to date," Brownell said. "It showed that if the election were held today Dewey and Bricker would win with some votes to spare. I am tremendously encouraged by the series of reports."

Only a 4 per cent shift in votes from 1940 is necessary to win, and the survey showed this exceeded, he said. The swing back to Republicanism is especially noticeable in the border states, he declared.

Separate reports made on congressional chances showed there will be "substantial" increases in G. O. P. strength. In the house, where Republicans hold 213 seats to 216 for the Democrats, it means his party will organize the committees of the body controlling the purse strings of the nation, Brownell said.

Hopeful of Winning Senate.

"There is a close fight for the senate," he said. "At the rate now apparent, continuation of the trend for two more months will give us control."

In giving his reasons for the reported trend, Brownell struck at the latest New Deal plea to retain "experience" in the White House as voiced Thursday night by Sen. Truman in his speech accepting the Vice Presidential nomination.

Regular Democratic leaders are resentful to the point of bitterness against the efforts of the Hillman-Browder radicals to take over party power, he said.

"It is the same fight for power that goes on in Washington today, where resignations are accepted, other officials are sent to 'Siberia,' and new, inexperienced hands are put in charge of the vital tasks of preparing the country for the peace time problems ahead," he said.

Calls Speech "Synthetic."

"Actions speak louder than words. Substitution of inexperienced men for men such as Nelson and Wilson [of the war production board] show speeches such as Truman's are synthetic."

Campaign plans beyond Dewey's 6,700 mile September cross-country tour were discussed, but will not be revealed now, Brownell said. James S. Kemper, Chicago insurance executive who is chairman of the national finance committee, reported on his arrangements for state finance chairmen.

NICKEL GIRLS SAVE UP TO BUY NEW PRESIDENT

Republican Stalwarts Seek 1,100 Recruits.

BY GLADYS PRIDDY.

Miss Mary Neff, lawyer and president of a group of 50 young business women currently calling themselves the "Girls-Who-Save-Nickels-to-Elect-a-Republican-President-club" yesterday announced a drive for recruits to help the campaign. She said the goal was a membership of at least 1,100—the 1940 figure.

The club members are secretaries, switchboard operators, and stenographers who are on call for volunteer office work with the business men's committee, and the county, state, and national Republican committees. The Girls-Who-Save-Nickels also canvass permanent residents in various clubs of the second precinct of the 1st ward, which is the southwest corner of the loop, and man the polling place at 33 W. Adams st. on election day.

They All Have Banks.

Their club name is no misnomer, however. They all have coin banks, according to Miss Neff, in which they deposit nickels for campaign contributions. In 1940, by saving the nickels accumulated thru forgoing luncheon desserts and extra cups of coffee, they turned over $700 to the Cook county central committee.

In their four years of organization, they several times have exercised the feminine prerogative of changing their minds about their name.

IN 1940, Miss Neff said, they were the Working Girls Who Save Nickels to Elect Willkie. After the election and after they had ceased admiring their candidate, she said, they became the Better Americans club. They changed to their present name before the primaries last spring and will retain it until after Nov. 7 when, campaigning over, they'll become Better Americans again.

Hope to Branch Out.

This year, she said, they hope to widen their activity politically. One plan is to organize a group of five minute speakers to send thruout the city. Weekly meetings of the club will begin at 6 p. m. Monday, Sept. 11, at 105 W. Adams st.

13 NEW POLIO CASES REPORTED FOR WEEK; YEAR AGO IT WAS 170

Thirteen cases of infantile paralysis, with no deaths, were reported in Chicago in the week ended yesterday, compared with 170 cases and 19 deaths in the corresponding week a year ago, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, said yesterday.

One new case in the city in the 24 hour period ended at 9 a. m. yesterday brought this year's total to 75 cases, with two deaths. There were 396 cases and 41 deaths reported to Sept. 1 last year, and 31 new cases and fourth deaths were reported in the 24 hours that ended at 9 a. m. on Sept. 1.

Dr. Edward A. Piszczek, Cook county health director, said an eight months old boy in Evanston was reported yesterday as the most recent infantile paralysis patient in the county. There have been 37 cases and one death in the county this year outside of Chicago. Last year there were 119 cases and 11 deaths at this date.

WOMEN RETURN BUT MEN KEEP UP FELT STRIKE

Striking women of the Western Felt works, 4115 Ogden av., returned to work yesterday but soon thereafter 75 or 80 men in the synthetic rubber department walked out again despite a union vote late Thursday to end the work stoppage. The company is in war work.

The strikers declared they would not work with the foreman, Joe Pittner, whom two women had accused of invading their locker room, altho they admitted he was accompanied by the stewardess and that no complaint was made at the time.

SOLDIER BALLOT WAITS DEADLINE ON WITHDRAWAL

With a printer's proof of the Nov. 7 ballot in hand, election officials yesterday planned extraordinary measures to speed ballots to voters in the army and navy.

The ballot is still subject to change. The last day for withdrawals fixed by the official calendar is Sept. 3, but because that is Sunday and Monday is a legal holiday, the time is extended to next Tuesday. Then the secretary of state must certify the ballot. That will be done as speedily as possible, said Lewis Vogel, chief of the secretary's election division, possibly by Sept. 9.

Advised to Have Type Ready.

"I have advised the Chicago election commissioners and other election officials thruout the state to have the ballots set in type now and have their printers ready to start the presses when we give the word," Vogel said.

"Our office is putting forth every effort to get out the soldiers' ballot early. We are working nights to do our part."

In the Chicago election board office 150 workers in the special soldier ballot unit will work tomorrow and Labor day, said Chief Clerk John S. Rusch. Many of them are teachers and will go back to school Tuesday. To replace them and do the increased work Rusch said he could use 250 typists. The pay is $6 a day.

Applications for ballots came in this week at the rate of 7,000 a day, Rusch said. Altogether the board has received 105,000. Each is copied in triplicate. One copy is for the board's files, one for the soldier's voting precinct and one is on gummed paper to be pasted on the ballot envelope for address.

Both Rusch and County Clerk Flynn said the soldiers' response was greater than they had anticipated.

SPECIALIST FLIES TO MILWAUKEE FOR POLIO WORK

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 1 [Special].—Six more cases of infantile paralysis were reported today by Dr. E. R. Krumbiegel, city health commissioner, coincident with the arrival here from Lansing, Mich., by airplane of Dr. Sidney D. Kramer, Michigan state epidemiologist, who will make a survey of the outbreak in suburban Shorewood.

There are now 64 cases in the Milwaukee area. Forty are in Milwaukee, 22 in Shorewood, and one each in West Allis and the town of Wauwatosa. Four of the latest cases are in Milwaukee and two in Shorewood, one of which is a 17 year old boy whose brother, 15, and sister, 11, also are patients in South View hospital, where all cases are treated.

Dr. Kramer was met at the airport by Dr. Eben J. Carey, dean of the Marquette university medical school, who will be in charge of research into the outbreak, and James O. Kelley, executive secretary of the Medical society of Milwaukee county.

2 Boy Commandos Seized After Raids End in Rout

Two 14 year old Brookfield boys, armed with commando knives and a revolver, were seized yesterday by state police after a two hour pursuit thru corn fields near 107th st. and Mannheim rd. They later admitted two burglaries and said they had eluded detention two days ago when the uncle of one them, a Brookfield policeman, questioned them about recent burglaries in the suburb.

Flee in Morning.

They fell asleep after breaking into a restaurant early yesterday at 107th st. and Mannheim rd. but fled when Edward Day, the owner, appeared in the morning to open the place. Policemen William Koepp and Gunnard Swanson, of the state highway station at Blue Island, took up the pursuit and radioed for help from two other squads. The boys were seized after a long chase.

They told police that they planned to run away from home and broke into the residence of Mrs. Bessie Wagner of Brookfield two weeks ago to get money.

Gold Coins Sold.

They stole $180 in currency and six gold coins which they sold to a Chicago pawnbroker for $9, they said. Then they bought the commando knives for $3.75 each in Chicago and purchased a .38 caliber revolver thru a young son of Joseph Rose, 109 Calender av., Brookfield, who has a display of guns in his automobile salesrooms near the Brookfield police station. A warrant was issued yesterday for Rose's arrest.

After Policeman Sieloff questioned and released the boys, they returned home, but bought bicycles the next day and left again. They rode south until night, then broke into the restaurant.

Police turned them over to juvenile authorities, and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sieloff and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rohrbacher, were subpenaed to appear in Juvenile court Sept. 11.

DAGO MANGANO FRIEND HELD IN MANN ACT CASE

Mrs. Florence Jackson Barad, 38, of 427 Roslyn pl., millinery shop owner who was questioned in the slaying of gangster Laurence [Dago] Mangano and accused in the hijacking of $15,000 worth of cigarets, was arrested by federal bureau of investigation agents again yesterday, this time on Mann act charges.

Mrs. Florence Barad.

Mrs. Barad was arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker on a complaint charging she transported Mrs. John Roberts, 25, from Detroit for immoral purposes. She pleaded not guilty. Her hearing was continued to Sept. 13 at the request of Asst. United States Atty. Francis J. McGreal.

Mrs. Barad previously was arrested on Aug. 9 on charges she received a portion of a shipment of army cigarets stolen July 9 from the American Motor Transport Lines, 2500 Taylor st. She was released on that charge after posting a $1,000 bond.

Mrs. Barad and Mrs. Roberts were arrested at Mrs. Barad's home Thursday night.

PEDDLER PAYS FOR OVERCHARGES.

TELLS OF SPYING FOR MONTHS ON DORIS FOR $16

New York, Sept. 1 [Special].—A 5th av. apartment house doorman testified today that for $16 he spied for months on Doris Duke Cromwell, the world's richest woman, and reported his stealthy observations to attorneys for James H. R. Cromwell, the dilettante politico and self-asserted "disciple of President Roosevelt."

The witness was Frank Cadwell, a dapper, gray haired man who said he earned $5 a day at his doorman job. He squirmed and became flustered at times during a three hour examination before Special Commissioner Martin Leach in the offices of Thomas Perkins, one of the tobacco heiress' lawyers.

Placed Her in New York.

His testimony's significance to the tangled Cromwell litigation was that it placed Doris—erroneously, she said—in Manhattan at a time she said she was a bona fide resident of Reno, Nev., where she was granted a divorce from Cromwell last December.

Cromwell subsequently got a New Jersey court to void Doris' Reno decree—a hearing at which Cadwell was a witness—and Doris is now seeking to reopen her Nevada divorce case and bolster its validity.

Cadwell, testifying today by order of Supreme Court Justice Thomas A. Aurelio, admitted he might have been wrong at strategic points in the testimony he gave for Cromwell.

Asked to "Say Few Words."

His appearance as a witness, he said, resulted from being approached by John C. Broady of Cromwell's legal battery, and being asked to "say a few words" in Cromwell's behalf.

The doorman testified that later he turned in to Broady eight detailed accounts of Doris' comings and goings at the home of her mother, Mrs. James B. Duke, across the street from his door post. He asserted he kept a careful record of her appearances between July, 1943, and May, 1944. He said he got $2 each for the eight reports.

"Best Make Mistakes."

Under the close examination of Atty. Theodore Kiendl, counsel for Doris, Cadwell became flustered. Tho he explained he gave the records to Broady and never saw them again, the attorney persisted in demands for dates to the doorman's utter confusion.

"The best of us make mistakes," he pleaded.

And when Kiendl assaulted his New Jersey testimony that he saw Doris enter her mother's home Sept. 18, 1943, three days before she got her Reno divorce, Cadwell lost his little remaining assurance and admitted:

"Yes, yes, I could have been six weeks out of the way."

DEWEY'S ITINERARY CHANGED TO PLEASE HIS HOME TOWNERS

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 1 [Special].—Owosso's desire to stage a civic welcome to its most eminent son has resulted in a change of plans for Gov. Dewey's Michigan visit Sept. 9-10, Gov. Kelly said today.

The governor said the Republican Presidential nominee had approved a revised schedule which would permit him to spend more time the evening of Sept. 9 with his "home town" neighbors who are planning an elaborate reception.

Gov. Dewey will arrive in Lansing shortly after noon Sept. 9 for conferences with Michigan party leaders and spokesmen for various groups. He will leave Lansing two hours earlier than planned, so he will arrive in Owosso at 8:45 p. m. He will be greeted there by Mayor J. Edwin Ellis and a reception committee who will escort him to the city hall, where he will make a brief talk.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Dewey will spend the night at the home of the candidate's mother, Mrs. George Dewey. Except for attendance at church the following day, he will make no further public appearances before leaving in the afternoon to complete his transcontinental tour.

Fire Marshal Scanlon Retires from Department

Fire Marshal Thomas J. Scanlon of the 6th division, who will become 63 years old tomorrow, retired from the fire department yesterday. He joined the department Oct. 4, 1905, and became a lieutenant Jan. 15, 1913; a captain Oct. 1, 1917, and a battalion chief in 1921. He was promoted to division marshal June 1, 1937.

Gary Corporal, Hollandia Vet, to Get Purple Heart

Chickasha, Okla., Sept. 1 (AP).—Five patients at Borden General hospital will be awarded Purple Hearts by Col. E. R. Gentry, commanding officer tomorrow. The group includes Corp. Valerin F. Gonsiorowski, 4707 Johnson st., Hammond, Ind., who was injured by a bomb blast near Hollandia, New Guinea, April 23.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by GAIL COMPTON

RECENT rains at the farm have not been as beneficial as anticipated. It was hoped the moisture would revive the pastures and make it possible to cut down amount of supplementary feed given live stock. Such has not been the case.

The rains brought greeness back to the meadows but the weather has been too cool to promote much growth. The grass had been overgrazed as a result of the drouth, and now is so short it takes sheep to browse anything off. The men do not believe that even the best weather now will be able to bring the pastures back to the point where they may be relied on to satisfy the animals. Approximately four wagon loads of corn are cut and fed each day now to replace the lack of grass.

Trees Shed Leaves.

The rain also has failed to halt the trees shedding their leaves. A lush spring brought out a wealth of foliage and then the drouth made it impossible for the trees to support this extra growth. As a result the leaves have been falling for almost a month now as if it were fall.

There is little chance of new leaves appearing this late in the year so autumn probably will find the farm short of leaves which annually put on a magnificent parade of color.

The rains have proved a help to late planted corn. It now appears in good condition. Unfortunately the fields are not as clean of weeds as is desirable and much of the moisture has gone to promoting weed growth instead of helping the corn. The drouth has already done its damage, however, and the men now are wondering if the grain will ripen before frost.

Kernels Are Late.

The dry weather delayed growth so much the kernel development is late and the corn might be caught by the first cold snap. The farm doesn't want any more soft corn. It had enough last year and it was a constant headache trying to get it fed out before it spoiled completely.

A young bull has been brought up from the Fox river farm to serve the Angus cows. The 41 cows will be field bred, and should start calving next year in June. A cow's gestation period is approximately 283 days; that of a mare, 340 days; a sow, 113 days; and a ewe, 148 days.

Altho the black calves are learning to eat out of the feed bunks, they still prefer to turn to their dams for food. This was never better illustrated than the other day when one of the farm men saw three of the youngsters nursing one cow at the same time. The cow seemed quite content with her big brood.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

THE blanching of celery by the use of draining tiles, as explained in this space yesterday, is the simplest method of tenderizing the stalks during the early part of the season. But the method, if used at all, should be discontinued when cold weather approaches. The tiles blanch the stalks, but do not protect them from frost.

In blanching celery with soil it is important that the gardener use a wheel hoe or other cultivator to thoroly pulverize the soil between the rows before raking it against the stalks. A fine, loose soil provides highest protection against frost and also reduces the chances of rodent damage.

Mice are common pests in soil-blanched celery. The presence of clods gives them access to the celery stalks. By hilling soil over the stalks, leaving only the terminal leaves exposed, gardeners can insure a celery harvest until mid-December.

EVERY DAY is LABOR DAY for your Grocer...

Yes, and we mean a day of real shirt sleeve labor. When other folks are taking time off to relax and have a bit of fun, your grocer is hard at it . . . working like mad to make up for the store help he's given to the armed forces and war plants. So be as considerate as you can! You've no idea how much he appreciates cooperation.

TIGERS DEFEAT BROWNS, 6 TO 3; TAKE 2D PLACE

Yankees Lose to Senators, 10-7.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 1 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers moved into second place in the American league tonight, two games behind the Browns and one percentage point ahead of the Yankees, when Hal Newhouser pitched Detroit to a 6 to 3 victory over St. Louis. It was Newhouser's 22d victory against eight defeats.

APPEAL BOARD RECLASSIFIES LITWHILER TO 1-A

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 1 (AP).—Danny Lithwhiler, St. Louis Cardinal outfielder, has been reclassified 1-A by a Presidential appeal board and now is subject to call by a Philadelphia draft board, state selective service headquarters announced today.

Litwhiler, who is 27, was classified 2-A by Philadelphia local board 54 several months ago and state headquarters, as required by law, referred his case to a St. Louis appeal board as he was employed there.

Col. Richard K. Mellon, state selective service director, when the St. Louis board upheld the 2-A classification, appealed to Washington for the ruling by the Presidential board.

Judelson to Play Wils for Links Crown

Hymie Judelson of Old Orchard and Harry Wils of Waveland will meet today in a 36 hole final for the Cook county amateur golf championship over the Columbus Park course. This morning 18 will be started at 9 o'clock and the afternoon round is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock. Each player will be seeking his first crown. In reaching the finals, Judelson eliminated Frank Manago of the home club yesterday, 4 and 3, and Wills gained the final bracket by beating Jim Taylor of Mid City by the same score.

Finalists Advanced with Ease.

The finalists had little trouble reaching the championship round. Wils was pressed only once in his four matches. When he met Eddie Kletcke of Navajo Fields in the quarter-final round the match went to the 21st hole before Wills triumphed, 1 up. Wils beat Frank Lilikes, 2 up, and Charles Cerminaro, 7 and 6, in earlier matches.

Judelson Out in 34.

Judelson turned back Ed Hoppe, 1 up, in 19 holes, then beat Dante Vicini of Ottawa, Ill., the medalist and defending champion, 2 and 1. In the quarter-finals he scored a 5 and 4 victory over Al Stanley of Columbus Park.

Judelson was three up at the turn in his match with Manago yesterday scoring a 34, one stroke over par. He had a birdie three on the first hole, and scored six pars.

Karl W. Bock, Omaha, Wins Seniors' Golf

Karl W. Bock, of the Omaha, Neb., Field club, shot a 79 to win the senior championship in the 22d annual Illinois Senior Golf association fall tournament at Exmoor yesterday. A field of 206 veterans, all 50 or over, competed.

The Senior of Seniors championship for golfers in Class A., 70 and over, was won by J. M. Bilderback of Champaign, Ill., with an 88. Class E, for members 50 to 55, who were not eligible for the main event, was won by Chick Evans of Edgewater with a 73, the low gross score of the day.

Ross H. Kidston of La Grange was elected president of the Senior's association at the dinner meeting after the tournament. Other new officers are: First vice president, Albert M. Johnson, Rockford; second vice president, George W. Rossetter, Knollwood; third vice president, John M. Timmons, Flossmoor; secretary-treasurer, Fred A. Cuscaden, Exmoor.

Chick Evans, Edgewater, 73—2—71; F. M. Swirles, Westmoreland, 82—9—73; W. M. Loomis, La Grange, 94—21—73; F. A. Cuscaden, Exmoor, 86—12—74; F. C. A Small Boy's Pockets.

[For Wesley.]

His bulging pockets yield so much
Of treasured loot preserved with care,
I gaze in wonder at each piece

An old bent nail, a knotted string,
A flat white rock to skip the waves,
He sees some value in each thing.

A stub of chalk, perhaps a snail,
A canceled stamp from distant mail.

I cannot scorn the golden hoard
Within the pockets of a boy,
Each homely bit assumes a grace
Because it carried him some joy.

Twenty Months Away.

Maybe there'll be more.
Twenty months of hoping,
That's the price of war.
Soon perhaps a furlough;
It's all I'm dreaming of—
Thirty days of heaven,
Thirty days of love.

Will twenty months have changed him,
Twenty months or more?
It seems a million nights he's been
On that tropic shore.
A million days I've waited
For news of one so dear.
Time will live and sing again
When he's really here.

Proudly I shall meet him,
Forgotten every care;
He'll be tanned and khaki-clad,
And we'll walk on air
Arm-in-arm together
Thru the station door.
O, it's worth while waiting

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The White Sox and the Cleveland Indians must be rated flopperoos on their over-all 1944 record but it remained for the two outfits to put on one of the best baseball entertainments of the season as the Sox won, 5 to 4, in the 12th inning in Comiskey park last night. The fact that the Indians made seven errors and the Sox four served to enhance the interesting aspects of the game rather than detract from its entertainment value.

Joe Haynes, the smiling right hander who, with Lefty Ed Lopat has done all the Sox winning in the club's last 10 games, went all the way in his pitching assignment and was strong enough to drive home the winning run with a single with two out in the 12th inning. Joe took charge after watching Skeeter Webb waste a leadoff double in the ninth and a triple with one out in the 11th, not to mention a lot of other earlier lost opportunities.

This Was the Pay Off.

Ralph Hodgin opened the 12th with a single, his first hit off Al Smith, who went all the way to suffer his 10th loss of the season, and his fourth at the hands of the Sox, whom he whipped five times without a loss last season. John Dickshot sacrificed and, when Smith's toss toward Mickey Rocco hit John in the back, Hodgin was safe at second and Dickshot at first. Guy Curtright, an early hero who had knocked a two run homer to tie the score 'way back in the second inning, tried to sacrifice, but forced Hodgin at third.

Dickshot went to third and Curtright to second on a wild pitch. Then Hal Trosky was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Thurman Tucker went to third to run for Dickshot. Mike Tresh lined to Oris Hockett in short left, the runners holding their bases. Haynes then lined a clean single to left, scoring Tucker with the winning run.

It was the Sox's ninth victory in 27 night games and their second over the Indians, whom they have beaten 14 times this season, night and day. The Indians have won six, including three in Cleveland last week-end. The teams will play tonight and will wind up their 1944 relations in a single game tomorrow afternoon.

Carnett Helps Mr. Keltner.

The fun started in the second inning when each team scored two runs on a homer—the Indians' a spurious in-the-park affair, the Sox's a bonafide smack. Lou Boudreau opened the second with a single to right and was out trying to steal. Roy Cullenbine singled to left, then Ken Keltner lined to center. Ed Carnett misjudged the ball, then fell down as it rolled past him to the center field wall. Cullenbine scored and Keltner followed him across the plate standing up, credited with his 13th homer of the season.

With one out in the home second Dickshot was safe on the first of Keltner's three errors and preceded Curtright home when Guy knocked the ball high into the under deck of the left field stands.

The Indians took a 4 to 2 lead

WILL RACE BE FREE FOR ALL?

A worthy successor in a line of great juveniles owned by John Marsch of Chicago, Free for All is the leading contender in the $25,000 added Washington Park Futurity today. Free for All and Errard, another Marsch colt, are paired as an entry which is likely to be an even choice in the betting. If all seven nominees start, the race will gross $62,300.

Sir Bim, owned by Don Ameche, is listed at 4 to 1, being the second choice after the Marsch entry. He has been in the money six times in seven races, winning two.

Fighting Don, the property of Miss Gertrude Donovan, also is a leading contender, having been brought to Chicago after a successful campaign on eastern tracks.

MARSCH COLTS SEEK 3D IN ROW AT WASHINGTON

Youngsters' Day

SEVEN of the nation's best 2 year olds were entered overnight for the $25,000 added Washington Park Futurity to be contested over six furlongs today at Washington Park. The field in post position order follows:

Horse.	Wt.	Rider.	Prob. odds.
Limestone	118	W. Bailey	20-1
Fighting Don	118	F. Zufelt	6-1
Sir Bim	118	A. Bodlou	4-1
Fr. Neptune	118	J. Higley	12-1

Icangetit	118	C. Corbett	8-1
*Errard	118	L. Haas	1-1

*John Marsch entry.

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

Two of John Marsch's fanciest juveniles, the unbeaten Free for All and Errard, will contest the issue today with five other 2 year olds in the sixth running of the $25,000 added Washington Park Futurity at Washington Park.

Altho the field includes Miss Gertrude Donovan's Fighting Don, an importation from the Atlantic seaboard and winner of his first three starts, including the Great American stakes at Aqueduct, and Don Ameche's Sir Bim, a speedy and courageous sprinter, there is little doubt the Marsch pair will go postward the public's choice, probably at even money.

Worth $49,400 to Winner.

Also in the field are Henry Tikulski's Icangetit, Mrs. Emil Denemark's Father Neptune, and Thomas Piatt's Limestone. Limestone, a capable "off" track performer, was a surprise entrant.

To the winner of the 6 furlong event will go $49,400, for with seven starters the gross value of the race is $62,300. Second place will be worth $7,000; third place, $3,500; and fourth place, $1,500. The original list of nominations on Nov. 1, 1943, totaled 313.

Free for All, the midwest's champion 2 year old on the basis of four consecutive victories since he made his debut a winning one at Hawthorne on June 17, has won $61,725, of which $48,525 went into the Marsch coffers thru his triumph in the Arlington Park Futurity.

Winning Is Marsch Habit.

Errard was beaten only three-quarters of a length by Free for All in the Arlington fixture and has won his last two outs, both by three lengths over Best Effort.

Sir Bim has been in the money six times in seven starts and has won twice, each time in easy fashion. The son of Bimelech is a definite threat to the Marsch entry if the track is fast, but mud is not at all to Sir Bim's liking.

Marsch's Occupy won last year's Futurity, following in the steps of his brother, Occupation, which took the 1942 running of the event, inaugurated in 1937 and won by Tiger. Best time for the race is 1:11, held jointly by Tiger and Alsab, the 1941 winner. Otto Grohs will have the leg up on Free for All and Buddy Haas will ride Errard.

Some Chance Wins Feature.

Abe S. Hewitt's Some Chance, a probable starter in the $50,000 added Washington Park handicap Monday, won yesterday's feature race, the $3,500 Sir James handicap, which drew a field of seven.

Some Chance was ridden by J. C. Gilbert, an apprentice, and scored by three and one-half lengths over Creech and McIlvain's Bright Willie as the Happy Hours farm's Happy Pilot took the show. The winner of the seven furlong affair paid $8.40 for $2.

The daily double races went to Mrs. Albert Sabath's Troop Train, which paid $4.20 in winning the opener, and Mrs. E. A. Simpson's Rex-Avis, $10.60 victor in the second. The double return was $28.40.

CUBS CLIMB TO 4TH BY WINNING FROM REDS, 3-2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 1.—The Cubs stepped out boldi ytonight and pried their way back into the first division by flanking the skilled Bucky Walters, who was jousting for his 20th victory of the season, and his fellow Reds. The job was done successfully, principally because of a heavy load of timely hitting delivered by Dom Dallessandro and an equally heavy batch of rescue pitching engineered by Paul Erickson after Bill Fleming had been officially judged too friendly with the enemy. The score was 3 to 2.

Dallessandro was such a busy little fellow in the fabrication of Walters' seventh defeat that he figured in all three of the Cubs' scoring episodes. He singled in a run in the first inning, an edge that was promptly converted into a 2 to 1 deficit against Fleming. The Cubs tied it in the fourth, thanks to Dallessandro originating the move by doubling, and then had to wait until the eighth for the run that proved decisive. Dallessandro got in on this incident with another single.

Bill's Reputation Pays Off.

Bill Nicholson's reputation as a home run artist was responsible for getting Walters into the muddle from which the Cubs fished the winning run. Nicholson walked at the start of the eighth, this being his third pass. Dallessandro immediately singled to center and in one way or another, Nicholson, who usually plays 'em close to his shirt on the bases, reached third from where he counted on Don Johnson's fly to Eric Tipton. When Len Merullo singled and Dewey Williams walked, it looked as if there might be more suitable developments, but Erickson fanned and Stan Hack grounded out to end a hitting streak that had extended thru 16 games.

Erickson got into the electric light party in the fourth after Fleming had been knocked about by six hits in the three preceding innings. The rescuing speed baller

McNeill Beats Greenberg in Quarter-Final

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—Two officers who soon are due for overseas duty put on the closest and most exciting duel of the third war time National tennis meet today as Lt. Don McNeill of the navy whipped Lt. Seymour Greenberg of the army, 6-3, 4-6, 3-6, 6-1, 8-6, to enter the semi-final round.

McNeill, the 1940 National champion and seeded second this year, has been attached to the American embassy in Argentina for the last two years. He now is stationed at Norfolk, Va., where he has been assigned to an aircraft carrier as an intelligence officer. Greenberg, the Chicago southpaw, seeded fifth, is an air force communications officer at Grenier field, Manchester, N. H.

Segura Advances.

Joining McNeill in the semi-final round were top seeded Pancho Segura of Ecuador and Sgt. Frankie Parker of Muroc field, Cal., ranked fourth. They scored easy triumphs over the unseeded foes. Segura routed Maj. Alexander H. [Zan] Carver of Philadelphia 6-0, 6-3, 6-4, and Parker beating Charles W. Oliver of Perth Amboy, N. J., 6-2, 6-4, 6-1.

The other quarter final match between William Talbert of Indianapolis, seeded third, and Cadet Bobby Falkenburg of Hollywood, Cal., ranked sixth, will be played tomorrow.

California Women Win.

California's Big Four of Pauline Betz, Margaret Osborne, Louise Brough, and Dorothy May Bundy, seeded in that order, filled the semi-final brackets in women's singles altho three of them were extended to the limit to win today's matches.

Paul Waner Signs with Yankees as Pinch Hitter

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Paul Waner, 41 year old reserve outfielder given his release by the Brooklyn Dodgers earlier this week, signed with the New York Yankees today. Waner's 1944 batting average is .287 altho he hit .366 as a pinch hitter, his prospective role with the Yankees.

took the Reds down the line almost as fast as they showed up at the plate. Woody Williams nicked him for a single with two defunct in the fourth and this should have been the only hit, but Nicholson misjudged a fly by Walters in the seventh and it became a two base blow with none out. But even this failed to cause confusion in the Cubs' pitching department.

Dallessandro Drives in Run.

The first inning, which netted Fleming a one run lead for a few minutes, became interesting when Roy Hughes singled with one out. Nicholson came up after two were out, so was purposely passed but Dallessandro spoiled Walters' scheme by letting go the single that scored Hughes. In the Reds' half of the first Woody Williams walked and after Jo Jo White had been fanned, Gerald Walker singled. Frank McCormick also singled to produce a run. Then Dewey Williams dropped a pop foul by Mueller and the latter followed with a tap that led to a force play and also to the scoring of Walker.

Dallessandro got into the anti-Walters balloting again in the fourth when he led off with his double to right center. Johnson followed with a single to right but as nobody had been retired, Dallessandro decided to stop at third. A pass to Merullo came next and then a line drive by Dewey Williams that Walker snared. At this stage Lou Novikoff was introduced to bat for Fleming and he responded with a long fly ball on which Dallessandro scored the tying run.

PACIFIC COAST COMMISSIONER ATHERTON DIES

Santa Monica, Cal., Sept. 1 (AP).—Edwin N. Atherton, 47, appointed commissioner of the Pacific Coast conference in 1940 by a faculty committee that sought to end proselyting of athletes, died last night in Santa Monica hospital from complications following a gall bladder operation which he underwent five weeks ago. Atherton previously was an agent of the federal bureau of investigation.

PIRATES RETAIN FRANKIE FRISCH FOR NEXT YEAR

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 1 (AP).—President William E. Benswanger of the Pittsburgh Pirates announced today that Manager Frank Frisch has signed a contract to direct the team another year—his sixth.

Frisch today received notice from President Ford Frick of the National league that he had been fined $75 for an argument with an umpire in Chicago Wednesday.

Jack Crangle, Former Illini Full Back, Dies

Ashkum, Ill., Sept. 1 [Special].—Funeral services will be held here Monday at 9:30 a. m. in the Assumption Catholic church for Walter F. [Jack] Crangle, 45, former University of Illinois full back, who died at 12:30 a. m. today at his home in Independence, Mo., as a result of a heart attack.

Jack Crangle.

Survivors include his widow, Marjorie, and two sisters, Mrs. William White, Peoria, and Mrs. John Phillips, Ashkum.

Informed of Crangle's death, Bob Zuppke, his former coach, said, "I am sorry to learn of the passing of this fine man and great football player—the hardest hitting full back I ever had at Illinois."

Crangle played four years at Illinois, including his freshman year, 1918, and was on Zuppke's championship elevens that year and in 1919. He later served for several years as assistant coach at the University of Missouri.

ASSAILS HASTY SPENDING WITH POLITICAL CAST

Door Open to Idle Relief: Doughton.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Bernard M. Baruch's statement the house approved demobilization bill is "inadequate" today brought from Rep. Doughton [D., N. C.] the reply that "it is not the time to enact hastily legislation costing unknown billions when the atmosphere is polluted with political considerations." The ways and means committee chairman added: "Congress has not closed the doors on relieving unemployment."

The house yesterday passed a demobilization and reconversion bill drafted by the ways and means commitee which agreed with the senate to leave unemployment compensation to the states, but discarded senate provisions for retaining war workers for other jobs, transportation back home, and blanketing 3½ million federal workers under unemployment compensation protection. A senate-house conference committee tomorrow will begin efforts to compromise differences in the two bills.

Termed 'Must Legislation.'

Baruch said in a statement today that unemployment compensation is "must legislation" and added that the house bill "seems certainly inadequate."

In a statement he indicated he believed payments should vary according to living costs in individual communities, and did not favor uniform, nation-wide standards.

Baruch's statement was given to Richard Frankensteen, vice president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, with permission to make it public. The CIO-UAW has been a vigorous advocate of increased unemployment compensation in the reconversion period.

"Best Bill Possible."

"Our opinion is that this is as far as we can go at this time," Doughton said. "I don't say it is adequate or inadequate. It's the best bill we can prepare until we know more about the actual problems we will confront. Baruch hasn't given us a plan showing the cost or where the money is coming from.

"If there is to be substantial unemployment, I hope we can see its approach in time to provide the necessary legislative remedy. What we have done does not close the books on relieving unemployment if it occurs, but in my judgment we can do a better job when we know just how serious, if at all, the problem is likely to become."

Both Doughton and Rep. Knutson [Minn.], ranking ways and means Republican, contended that state unemployment compensation funds are adequate to meet unemployment problems.

'BLOCK U. S. DICTATION'

Legislation adopted Thursday by the house which left unemployment compensation under state control is a step forward in eliminating the possibility of federal dictation of state job insurance, James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, said yesterday.

The plan advanced by New Deal congressmen to increase payments by using federal funds "would have federalized the unemployment compensation system and destroyed the application of 'experience rating' in fixing payment rates of employes," he said. Experience or merit rating provides for variable rates of payment by employers in accordance with how well they stabilize employment.

NATIONAL CYLINDER GAS.

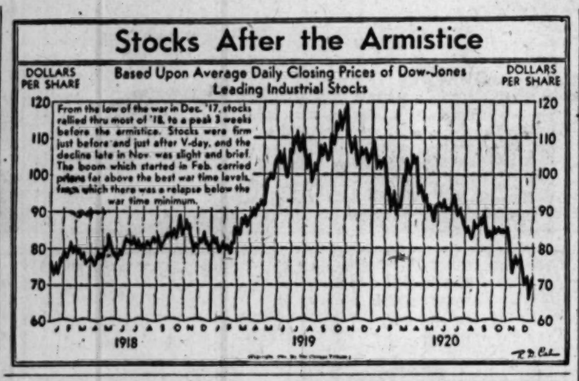
Your opinion regarding the effect of National Cylinder Gas company's recent financing on the position of its common stock will be appreciated. I refer to the issuance of 35,000 shares of $4.25 cumulative preferred stock [par $100], with a combined annual dividend and sinking fund requirement of $253,750.—J. S.

Answer: The $3,359,000 net proceeds of the preferred stock sale were to be added to the company's cash funds for general corporate purposes, including the acquisition of government owned plants operated by the company.

Whether the financing ultimately will be advantageous for the common stock holders will depend chiefly on the productivity of the new capital, that is, whether it earns more or less than its cost. On this point, the stockholders in authorizing the stock at their meeting last month accepted the judgment of the directors that the new capital could be used to the company's advantage.

Without allowance for prospective returns from the employment of the new funds, National Cylinder's net income in each of the last five years has been well in excess of the annual obligations created by the new financing. In the six months ended June 30, 1944, the consolidated profit was $639,717, exclusive of an equity of $288,614 in the undistributed earnings of two affiliates. Profit in the entire year, last year was $1,860,701, excluding an equity of $239,284. In 1938, a poor business year, consolidated net income was $471,056.

The $253,750 service requirements on the preferred stock are a maximum, as the dividend needs will decrease as the outstanding preferred is reduced thru the sinking fund of 3 per cent a year.



Stocks After the Armistice
Based Upon Average Daily Closing Prices of Dow-Jones Leading Industrial Stocks
DOLLARS PER SHARE
From the low of the war in Dec. '17, stocks rallied thru most of '18, to a peak 3 weeks before the armistice. Stocks were firm just before and just after V-day, and the decline late in Nov. was slight and brief. The boom which started in Feb. carried prices far above the best war time levels, from which there was a relapse below the war time minimum.

Probe of Farm Machine Grab Is Demanded

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—A congressional investigation of alleged plans for sending 5,500 American made farm tractors and tens of thousands of other farm machines to Europe this year was urged in the house today by Rep. Calvin Johnson [R., Ill.].

Johnson said in a floor speech that the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration is demanding that the tractors and other equipment be taken from this country's fourth quarter production and "turned over to Europe," despite serious shortages at home.

"UNRRA on the March."

"UNRRA is again on the march," the congressman told the house. "This group of crystal gazers, whose heads are in the clouds and whose hands are in our pockets, are again attempting to dip into American farm machinery production and grab a large portion for distribution thruout Europe.

"In addition to 5,500 tractors UNRRA wants 4,675 grain drills, 15,000 steel bottom walking plows, 1,950 two bottom tractor plows, 100 one-way plows, 23,000 knapsack sprayers, 3,500 ground drive mowers, 3,550 tractor trailers, 3,100 three bottom tractor drawn plows, 900 four bottom plows, 9,348 spring tooth harrow sections, and 860 tandem disc harrows.

Output Behind Schedule.

"This equipment is to be taken in spite of the fact that farm machinery production is behind schedule and dealers thruout the country have been notified that their allotments of certain types of equipment have been cut as much as 60 per cent. This machinery has been demanded and the war food administration has been directed to make it available.

"Unless drastic steps are taken to stop this allocation, it will be lost forever to American farmers who have been called upon to feed our people and the armies of the allied world."

8 STATES PLACED AT TOP FOR CORN PICKER DELIVERY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Eight states west of the Mississippi river have been selected for preferential delivery of corn pickers, G. F. Geissler, director of the western division of the agricultural adjustment agency, informed Rep. Carlson [R., Kas.] today.

Manufacturers have been requested by the government to fill the total allocation of corn pickers in these states from their earliest production, Geissler said.

Elevated, Motor Coach Passenger Traffic Gains

The Chicago Rapid Transit company carried 16,303,595 revenue and transfer passengers in August, an increase of 15.9 per cent from August, 1943, it reported yesterday. In the first eight months of 1944, passengers aggregated 126,729,295, a gain of 9.27 per cent. Chicago Motor Coach passengers rose 8.1 per cent in August to 6,344,897, and 4.6 per cent in the eight months to 46,885,728, exclusive of transfers.

WPB TO ENCOURAGE WAR WORK SHIFT TO SPECIALIZED PLANTS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—A policy of encouraging the transfer of war production from plants that may readily be reconverted to civilian output to special purpose plants, such as Ford's Willow Run, was announced today by WPB.

Representatives of Ford Motor company and the CIO United Automobile Workers were told by Arthur H. Bunker, WPB deputy executive chairman, that the board favors moving additional aircraft work into Willow Run "if it can be done without interfering with the war effort or other production schedules."

The meeting was called to determine what work could be shunted to Willow Run to replace the production of B-24 Liberator bombers, now being sharply reduced.

Stock Market Pushes Ahead; Trade Heavier

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Peace rated issues extended advances as the stock market pushed ahead today. Steels, rails, motors, utilities, and oils were narrow thruout, but prices of some favorites stiffened at the close and gains of fractions to a point or more were well distributed.

The allied drive toward Germany, combined with the approaching three day holiday, tended to accentuate speculative and investment caution. The Associated Press 60-stock average was up 0.1 at 55, a net gain for the week of 0.1. Transfers of 637,510 shares compared with 604,740 yesterday.

Sentiment was aided by the sale of a stock exchange seat for $64,000, an increase of $4,000 over the last sale. A few recently depressed aircrafts rallied on the belief they may have been oversold on peace talk.

CHICAGO SHARES RISE.

Prices were higher in increased volume of 29,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Leaders included Wisconsin Bankshares, which closed up ⅛ at a 1944 high of 12; Chicago corporation, up ¼, and Libby McNeill & Libby, unchanged. Other new peaks were set by Aro Equipment, up 2¾, and Bendix Aviation, up ¾.

BOND PRICES IRREGULAR.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Trading interest was at low ebb in the bond market today and prices closed irregular. Dealings totaled $4,581,500, against $5,183,000 yesterday. The Associated Press rail, utility, and low yield averages gained, but other divisions were unchanged.

LIMIT STORAGE SPACE USE FOR FROZEN FOODS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Because of a shortage of cold storage space, the war food administration today limited quantities of frozen fruits and vegetables and packaged frozen fish which may be stored in warehouses to the quantity stored on Oct. 1, 1943.

Officials said the limit on frozen fruits and vegetables was made necessary by the rapid growth of the frozen food industry, leading to what they termed the use of a disproportionate share of freezer space for these commodities. The new order allots to these commodities about one-fourth of the total freezer capacity of the country.

The WFA also issued other restrictions designed to help solve the storage problem. One prohibits the storage of any product in lots smaller than 300 pounds and another restricts the storage of frozen poultry in space wasting barrels and baskets.

New Power Device Aids Bombers

Development of a new super type of alternating current generator to improve the efficiency of America's biggest bombers was announced yesterday in Los Angeles, Cal., by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. The new units, said to be capable of supplying electric energy equivalent to the work of 500 men, were developed in the company's works in Lima, O.

The new generators are said to be a large improvement over the ordinary low speed direct current types which are commonly used, H. E. Keneipp and C. G. Veinott, Westinghouse engineers, told a meeting of the American Association of Electrical Engineers.

Develop Direct Drive.

Work is going forward now on development of a satisfactory main engine drive system from an airplane's motors to give the generators an unvarying flow of power, they said. In the meanwhile, small auxiliary engines will be used to drive the alternators.

Advantages afforded by use of the new generator are multiple, the engineers asserted. The direct current systems tend to create hot, destructive arcs which burn away contact points when switches are opened at high altitudes and under conditions of combat damage. These conditions are eliminated in the new unit.

An electrical plant of higher power is needed to operate gun turrets, radio sets, instruments, controls, and all other devices that make up the equipment on a bomber, they explained.

Units Light and Small.

The new alternators weigh only 85 pounds and are only 19 inches long and nine inches in diameter, yet each unit is equipped to produce 30 per cent more power than the two and one-half ton industrial generator, shoulder high, which furnishes power to the Westinghouse Lima plant's testing laboratory.

The Westinghouse engineers predicted that this is only the first step in the development.

"Experience gained in the building of these alternators can be used to develop better and lighter machines, or machines of still higher ratings," they said. "The limit of ratings of aircraft generators is not even in sight."

Seek to Lift Bans on Gold, Silver Export

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—A congressional effort to lift restrictions against export of gold and silver, so that producers may cash in on current high foreign markets, was initiated jointly today by Sen. Scrugham [D., Nev.] and Rep. Engle [D., Cal.].

They introduced companion bills in the senate and house to set aside statutory and executive barriers to permit sales of newly-mined metals abroad. The legislation would apply only to gold and silver produced in the United States, its territories, and possessions.

Higher Prices in India.

The bills assert that on the Bombay market South African gold is selling at $58 an ounce and silver, lend-leased by the United States treasury to India, at $1 to $1.09 an ounce.

The treasury withheld comment. However, the proposal conflicts sharply with the present policy of treasury purchase of all domestic gold, for which it pays $35 an ounce, and which forbids producer exportation of silver, for which the government pays 77.11 cents an ounce under its silver purchase program.

Needed Metals Exempted.

"Those so called economists who object to higher United States treasury prices for gold and silver on the ground that this would constitute a subsidy hardly could object to domestic producers benefitting from high prices abroad," Scrugham said. "The bill specifically exempts export of such metal as is needed in the war."

He and Engle contended the legislation is necessary to maintain adequate production for the United States monetary system, for the welfare of producers, and for the stabilization of foreign economic and monetary conditions.

MASSED PICKETS BAR MEN FROM BEARING PLANTS

Cleveland, O., Sept. 1 (AP). — A shoulder to shoulder picket line blocked entrances to two Cleveland Graphite Bronze company plants today as a strike of 7,000 independent unionists entered its second day. The plants make bearings for military vehicles and planes.

A spokesman for the company said less than 200 workers entered the plant today and added: "The company has taken the position that as soon as the employes return, negotiations will be resumed."

The strike was called yesterday because the company refused to reinstate a workman discharged for breaking a lock on his locker, union officials said.

Seized Mines Open Monday.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 1 (AP).—Leaders of the supervisory workers coal union announced today 4,200 strikers at 10 mines seized by the government yesterday will return to work Monday, but served notice that strikes at other pits employing more than 3,000 men would continue until the operators recognize their union or the government takes over the properties.

Strike votes are scheduled next week at approximately 60 mines in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Kentucky under the supervision of the national labor relations board as provided under the war labor disputes act.

FEDERAL OUTLAY THRU 2 MONTHS TOPS 16 BILLION

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Government expenditures for the fiscal year which began July 1 reached $16,000,358,613 Aug. 30, the daily treasury statement showed. Net receipts totaled $4,686,106,512. On the corresponding day last year, expenditures for the 1944 fiscal year were $14,298,540,795.

War activity expenditures accounted for $14,586,898,995 of this year's total. In addition, war activity expenditures of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, as of Aug. 30, were $187,777,320 for the current fiscal year.

Settlement of Mexican Oil Claims Predicted

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1 (AP).—Early settlement of British and Dutch claims for the 1938 expropriation of oil properties by the Mexican government was predicted today by President Camacho, who told the opening session of congress: "I feel sure that during the course of the next months we shall reach an agreement with the governments of Great Britain and the Netherlands."

LIGHT RECEIPTS HOLD HOG PRICES AGAINST CEILING

Hog prices again pushed against office of price administration ceilings yesterday as receipts slid lower. Only 7,500 hogs arrived at the Chicago stock yards, including direct shipments to packers. This was the lowest Friday total since last October and the smallest volume for a Friday in September since 1941.

The $14.75 a hundred pounds ceiling bought most hogs weighing 240 pounds or less. The heavy hog ceiling of $14 was paid for hogs above 240 pounds, including heavy packing sows.

The light supply of cattle consisted mostly of butcher stock and the types of steers that sold at $16.50 and lower. The best reached $16.85.

Only 1,000 sheep and lambs remained on the open market after direct shipments to packers had been deducted from the receipts of 6,000. Steady prices were paid.

Liqueur Maker Buys Building on Ontario St.

Sunset, Inc., 123 N. Racine av., maker of cordials and liqueurs, yesterday bought for $135,000 cash the seven story building at 372-74 W. Ontario st., containing 52,500 square feet of floor space. When leases expire, Sunset will occupy the property. Lang Weise & Cella and Jones & Kerfoot were brokers.

GRAINS SLUMP ON WAR GAINS, PEACE RUMORS

May Barley Breaks 5 Cent Limit.

General liquidation developed in the grain markets yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade and May barley dropped the permissible limit of 5 cents a bushel. All deliveries of oats, July wheat and rye, and December and May barley sold at new seasonal low prices.

Closing trades were at the bottom, with the rank and file of traders predicting still lower prices. Wheat lost ½ to 1⅛ cents, rye ½ to 1⅛ cents, oats 2⅛ to 3⅛ cents, and barley 1⅝ to 5 cents.

Drop Follows Early Gains.

Favorable war news from Europe and belief Germany may ask for peace terms over the Labor day holidays provided the background for the selling. Liquidation started shortly before noon following a moderate advance in the early trading when markets were buoyed by announcement that the war production board would force distillers to use 10 per cent rye in production of industrial alcohol during the last quarter.

Further improvement in feed grain was a factor in the decline in oats and barley. Kansas City corn futures closed 1⅛ to 2¼ cents lower, with May at $1.06, or 10 cents under the Chicago ceiling on No. 2 yellow. The freight rate between the two markets is 9¼ cents a bushel. Brokers regarded the difference in prices between the two cities as indicating Chicago would be able to compete with the southwestern market for cash corn in Kansas and Nebraska.

Resumes Barley Trade.

Trading was resumed in barley futures in Minneapolis with December and May closing at $1 a bushel, or 16 cents under the ceiling there. This influenced the Chicago barley market. There was some selling here attributed to hedging by northwestern interests.

Distillers have been forbidden by the WPB to use corn during the remainder of the year in making industrial alcohol. However, the agency has relaxed the regulations in regard to grain sorghum to the extent 30 per cent can be used in the mash.

Tenders of 230,000 bushels of cash oats, said to be Canadian, and 470,000 bushels of cash rye were made on September contracts here. At Minneapolis tenders were 285,000 bushels of cash wheat. Buying of cash wheat in Minneapolis by the Commodity Credit corporation tended to cushion the decline in price.

Many Workers to Observe Labor Day at Their Machines

Many of the employes in Chicago's large war plants will observe Labor day by working as usual to maintain production quotas, a survey yesterday disclosed. Smaller plants are expected to operate with curtailed shifts. Stores, offices, and other places of business will take their customary holiday.

Most of the big war plants will operate partially, if not at full force. Douglas Aircraft company, Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, and the Dodge-Chicago plant will maintain full operations. International Harvester will operate where production is necessary to keep on schedule or for war needed goods. Many of the city's 70,000 radar-radio industry employes will have a holiday because production schedules are being maintained, it was said. The Buick aviation engine plant will be closed.

Stores to Close Monday.

State street stores will close Monday and operate from noon to 9 p. m. Tuesday.

Federal offices and government war agencies, including the office of price administration, the war labor board, and the war production board, will be open all day The city hall and county building will be closed; the city hall all day today also.

A capacity week-end load is expected by railroad and bus companies, which said that no extra transportation facilities will be available. The Chicago Motor club said heavy automobile traffic is expected within a 75 to 100 mile radius of Chicago, beginning today, but asserted it will not compare with normal years.

People Urged to Stay Home.

The office of defense transportation asked the public to refrain from all unnecessary travel, saying that military movements remain at peak levels. The agency predicted, however, that the Labor day weekend travel will be the largest of the summer.

Park district and city beaches will close officially for the season Monday night. The Art institute, Shedd aquarium, and Museum of Science and Industry will be open to visitors, but Adler planetarium will observe its regular Monday closing.

EXCHANGES RECESS.

The New York Stock and Curb exchanges and the Chicago Stock exchange will be closed today, the last of three Saturday holidays voted because of the shortage of help. Principal markets and banks will be closed Monday for the Labor day holiday.

Predict Peak Turkey Crop Will Fill Need

A record 35,666,000 turkeys, 8 per cent more than last year and 4 per cent above the previous record crop of 1940, will be raised this year, the department of agriculture said yesterday. Despite a set aside order to insure holiday dinners for the army overseas, a shortage for civilians is not expected.

The supply will be larger than early estimates, the department said. Producers' intentions on Jan. 1 indicated a 2 per cent increase above 1943.

Egg Production Rises.

The turkey crop in the western states, where about 31 per cent of the nation's turkeys are raised, is the largest on record, exceeding last year's crop by 10 per cent and the five year average [1936-'40] by 50 per cent. Turkey egg production was earlier and at least 20 per cent larger than last year.

The present turkey set aside order, covering 24 states and parts of three others, representing the major turkey producing areas, requires all turkeys produced and marketed in these areas to be set aside for military purchase until the required amount is obtained. The amount is expected to exceed the 35 million pounds obtained under a similar order last year.

Heaviest In November.

The time of marketings will depend to a large extent on developments, the department said. Intended marketings for October or earlier are 16.2 per cent of the crop; for November and Thanksgiving, 41 per cent of the crop; for Christmas and New Years, 32.1 per cent, and for the post-holiday market, 10.7 per cent.

OPA MAY SEEK 10 MILLION FROM EXPRESS AGENCY

Treble damages which may be asked from the Railway Express agency as the result of alleged overcharges against 564 American railroads are expected to total 10 million dollars, Rae E. Walters, regional price administrator, said yesterday.

The OPA filed suit against the express company in federal District court Thursday, seeking nominal treble damages of $19,119 covering reported overcharges against the Illinois Central. The suit charged the company rents trucks to virtually all American railroads, and that it charges them more rental than it did in March, 1942.

Combined Keystone Fund Assets Rise to 88 Million

Boston, Mass., Sept. 1 (AP).—Combined assets of the 10 Keystone funds total more than 88 million dollars, compared with $61,400,000 a year ago, Keystone Custodian Fund, Inc., has disclosed in two reports. The reports showed a net gain in net asset value per share of approximately 19 per cent on the bonds in 12 months and 16 per cent on the common stock in six months.

RETAILER SALES TOP WEEK AND YEAR AGO TOTAL

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Retail sales volume last week rose above the preceding week and a year earlier, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Sales were estimated at about 5 to 8 per cent above a year ago.

"Buying of apparel and accessories by students preparing for school was heavy," the report said. "Homewares were in good demand, altho supply was not too plentiful in a number of items."

Crude Petroleum Stocks Down 109,000 Barrels

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum totaled 222,931,000 barrels on Aug. 26, a net decrease of 109,000 barrels for the week, the bureau of mines reported today.

SOO RAILROAD REORGANIZING IS COMPLETED

Elect 2 Chicagoans to Directorate.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 1 [Special].—Final steps in the protracted reorganization of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railroad were effected today by the election of directors and officers of the new company. Two Chicagoans, J. E. Blunt and H. B. Vanderblue, were among directors elected.

H. C. Grout.

H. C. Grout of Minneapolis was elected president, having served as chief executive officer since last May. Prior to that he was general manager of the western lines of the Canadian Pacific railway. Other Soo officials elected included J. L. Hetland and C. S. Pope, vice presidents; P. J. Stock, secretary; C. H. Bender, treasurer, and J. E. Olson, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer.

Petition Filed in 1937.

The old company filed a bankruptcy petition on Dec. 31, 1937, and in June, 1938, trustees were appointed. Within three years the reorganization plan was filed, and 27 months later the plan was confirmed by Federal District Judge Nordbye. Immediately thereafter, three reorganization managers, including K. F. Burgess of Chicago, were appointed.

Securities to be issued by the new company will consist of $8,051,700 first mortgage 30 year 4½ per cent bonds, $20,129,000 general mortgage 50 year 4 per cent bonds, and 719,104 shares of no par common stock.

Claims of the old company's first consolidated mortgage bondholders are being paid in cash and in the new securities; claims of the second mortgage bondholders are being paid in the new common stock, and holders of the first refunding mortgage bonds will receive common stock and their distributive shares in 10 million dollars of Wisconsin Central first and refunding bonds, which had been pledged as collateral.

Net Income Increases.

Earnings of the Soo Line have increased substantially since the trusteeship began. Net income before fixed charges increased from $917,591 in 1937 to $5,246,518 in 1943, and in the first seven months of 1944 increased 78 per cent over the corresponding period of 1943.

Increased movement of grain and iron ore contributed to the higher profits. In 1943, Soo transported 90 million bushels of grain compared with 15 million bushels in the drouth year 1936. Iron ore shipments increased from 62,491 tons in 1932 to 1,936,330 in 1943.

RWLB DEMANDS BIG PENALTY IN MINE WAGE CASE

The regional war labor board yesterday announced it had recommended the largest economic penalty ever invoked by any WLB unit against the Clinton County Mining company of Breese, Ill. Chairman Edgar L. Warren said the penalty asked was $356,270 for alleged violation of wage ceilings.

The board recommended to other government agencies that this amount be disallowed as a cost of operations in computing federal income tax and in determining costs in contracts with the government.

Warren said the board learned that the company had given its employes wage increases aggregating 35 per cent between Jan. 1 and June 1, 1943, none of which was authorized by the board. He said the company had ignored notices of an enforcement panel hearing the case.

THREE FLORIDA RAIL PROPERTIES SOLD AT AUCTION

Miami, Fla., Sept. 1 (AP).—Properties of three railroad systems—the Seaboard All-Florida, Florida Western and Northern, and the East and West Coast railway—were sold at auction today for $9,350,000.

The only bid was made by the Seaboard Railway company. Robert F. Howard of Orlando, special master, said the company is not connected with the railroads whose property was being foreclosed. The price was set by federal District court as the minimum which could be accepted.

RADAR PLANTS TO TURN FULL POWER ON JAPS

65 Plants Here Will Ignore Hitler Fall.

Production of radar equipment by Chicago plants for the navy, no matter how soon the war in Europe ends, will be stepped up in the first half of 1945 by at least 3 per cent above output in the initial six months of this year, Leslie F. Muter, president of the Radar Radio Industries of Chicago, said yesterday.

Muter quoted a message from Ralph A. Bard, undersecretary of the navy, in which the 65 radar plants in Chicago were asked not to let down on production as the end of the European war nears.

Top Speed Is Aim.

"Pacific operations will be kept going at top speed or increased as we close in on Japan," the message said. "We must keep the cumulative power of our fleet and our production lines in high gear in order to pour on the enemy the greatest naval pressure in history."

Muter announced that a "parade of hostesses," one from each radar plant in Chicago, will receive replicas of the navy's certificate of achievement which will be presented Sept. 10 to the industry here as a whole at a celebration in Wrigley field. More than 40,000 employes are expected to attend, Muter said.

Lawrence H. Jacobson, deputy area director of the war man power commission, in a letter to Leonard J. Shapiro, executive secretary of the industry, said radar employes here "have set an example for all war plant workers in the Chicago area by sticking to their jobs."

Industry Praised.

"The WMC compliments the radar industry for its fine utilization of man power, and its employes who have made possible the winning of the navy award," Jacobson said. "Surrender of Germany will mean that every war worker in Chicago must work that much harder to finish the Pacific war as soon as possible."

WIFE OF A YANK IS ANNOYED BY 'FRIEND'S' RAPS

Mrs. Irene Malack, 31, of 1423 E. 69th st., whose husband, Henry, an army private, has been in New Gulinea more than two years, was embarrassed, she testified before Judge John T. Zuris in Grand Crossing police court yesterday, when her "boy friend," Pvt. Joseph W. Salazar, 37, pounded on the wrong doors Thursday night in the apartment building where she lives.

She swore out a warrant for his arrest, and Salazar appeared surprised yesterday to find himself accused of disturbing the peace. He once served in the Mexican army, he wears a mustache, and is stationed at Camp Skokie. Mrs. Malack said she has known him for seven months.

"I didn't think I did anything wrong," said the gallant Salazar, "but I'm willing to take my punishment. I spent $75 on her yesterday." He clicked his heels and bowed when placed under $1,000 peace bond.

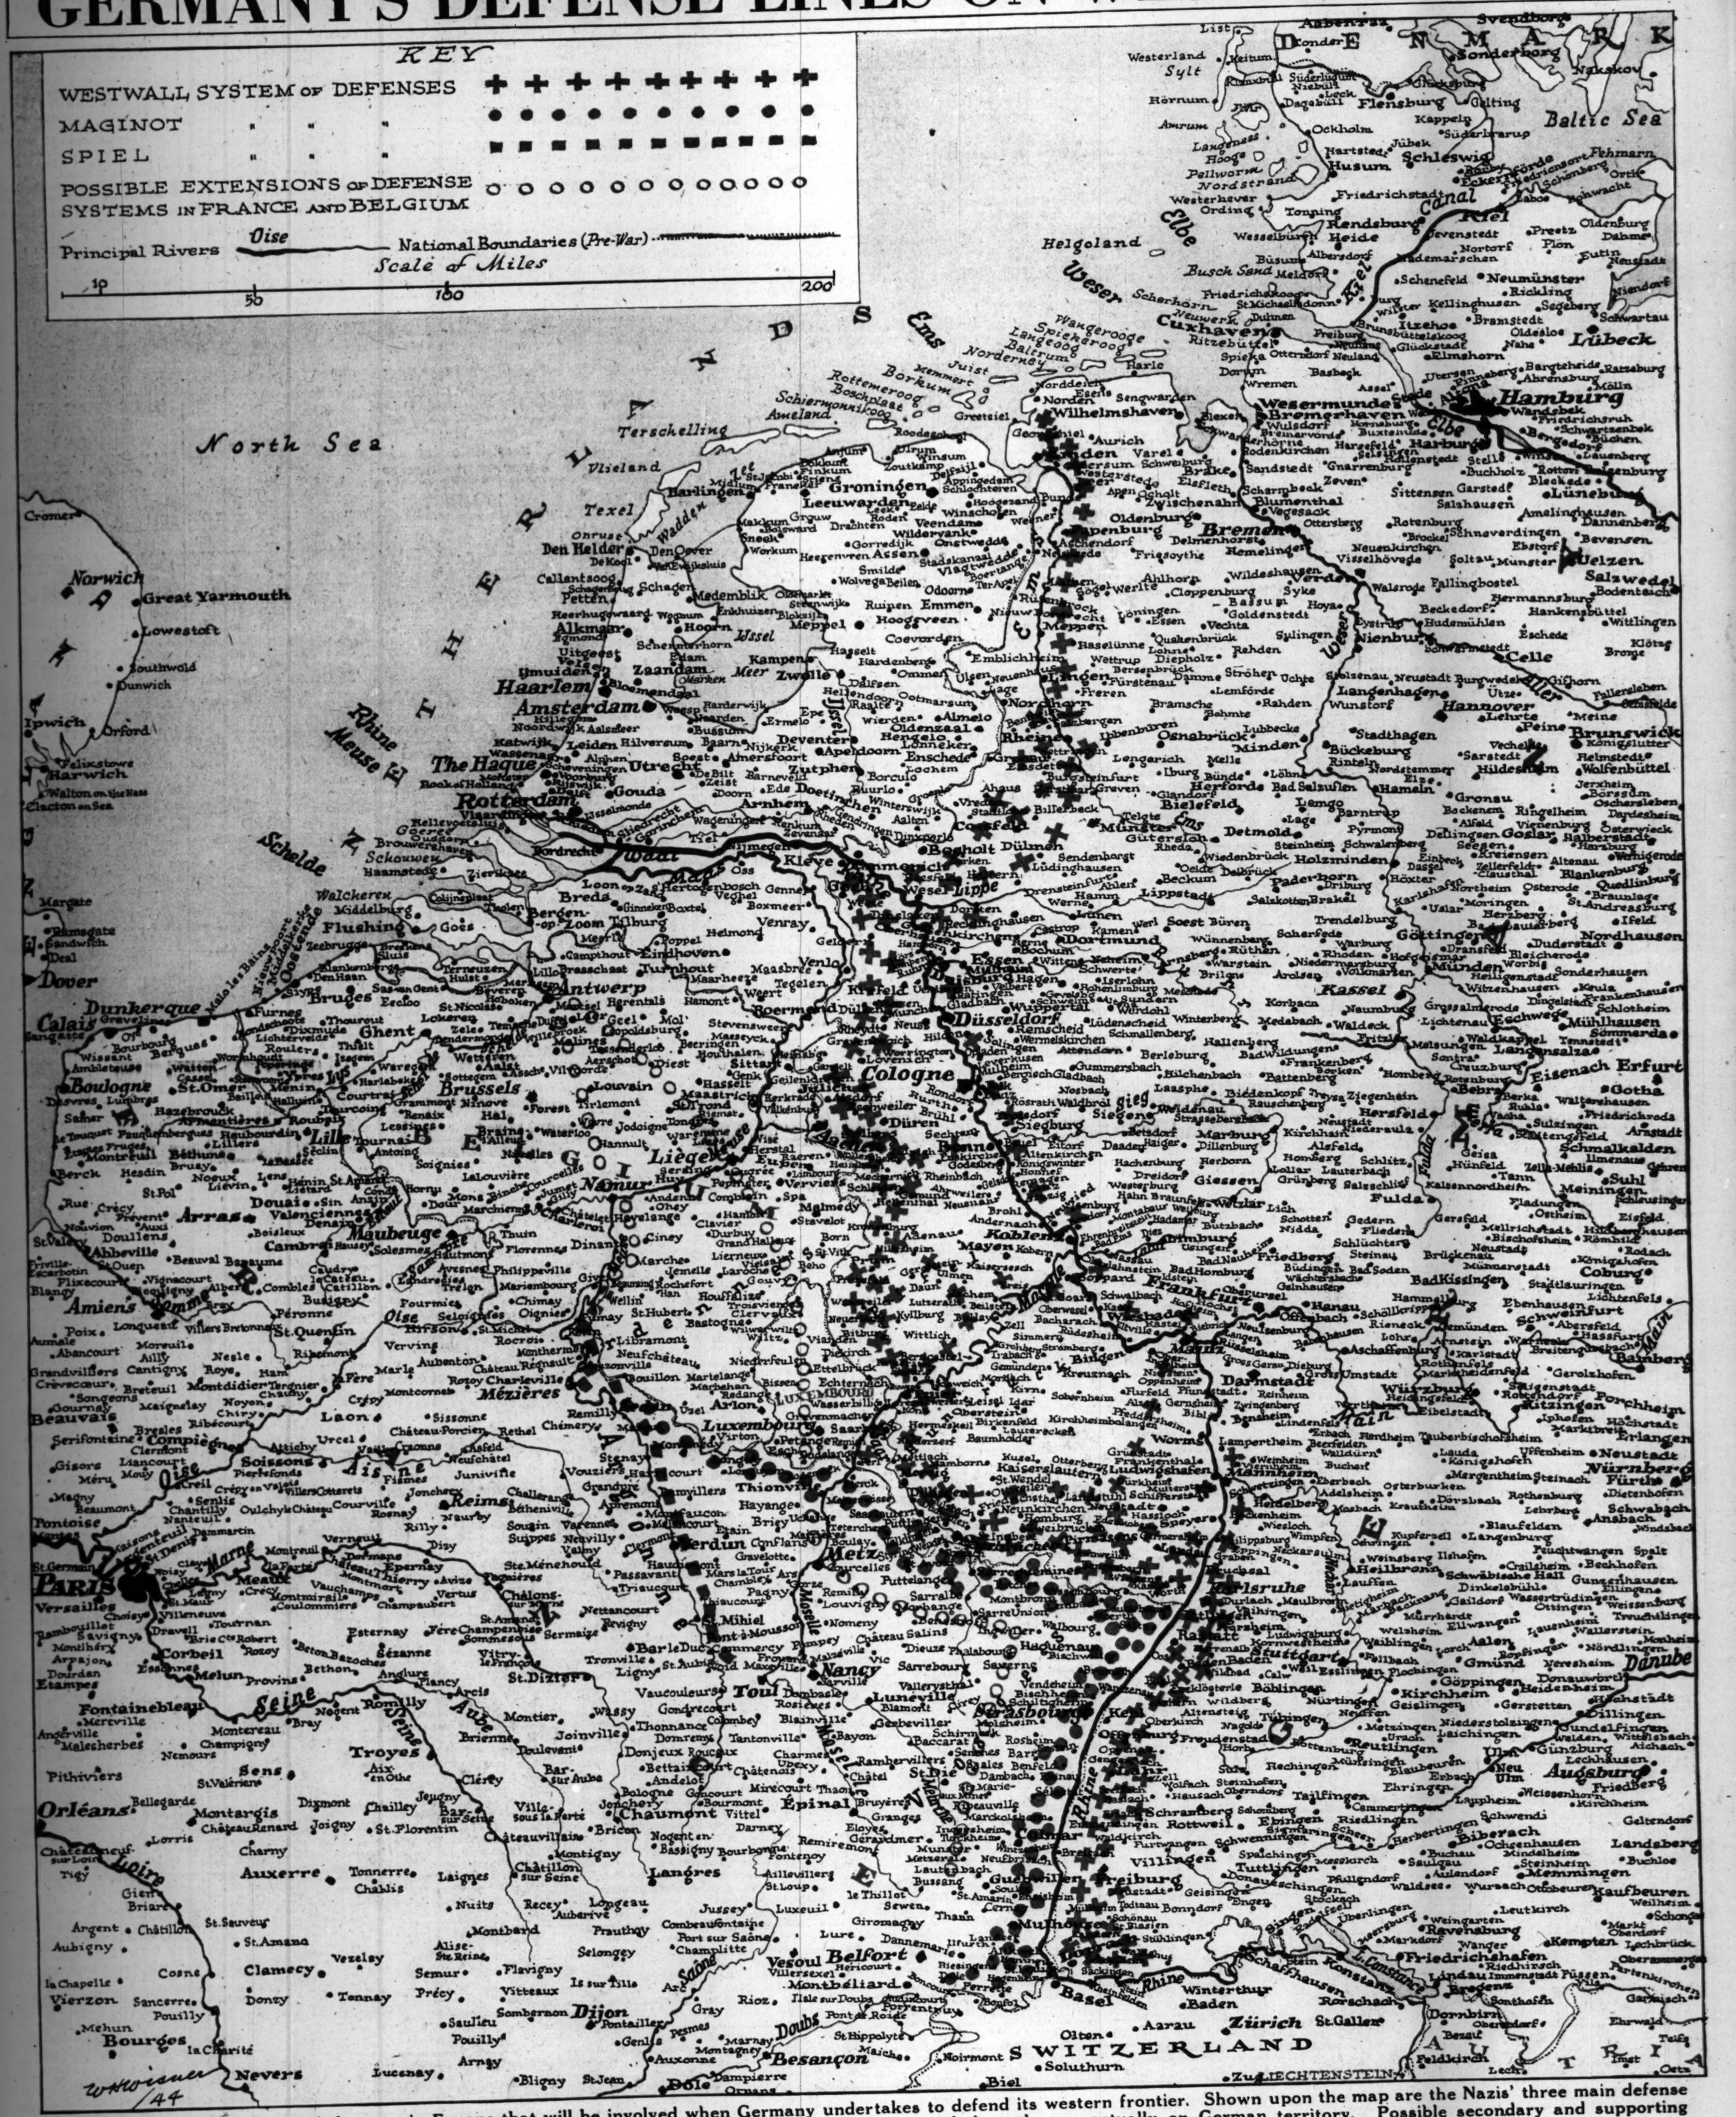
GERMANY'S DEFENSE LINES ON WESTERN FRONT



This is a new military map of the area in Europe that will be involved when Germany undertakes to defend its western frontier. Shown upon the map are the Nazis' three main defense lines facing the allied armies in France, the Spiel line, Maginot line, and Westwall, the last named the only one actually on German territory. Possible secondary and supporting German defense lines also are indicated. An explanatory article appears elsewhere in this issue.
